planning to send additional arms to the islands.

An effort is being made to locate the schooner Norma which, it will be remembered, left Victoria nearly two months ago supposedly for the islands with a lot of contraband oplum. Another vessel is supposed to have left Victoria on a similar mission shortly after the Norma and Deputy Collector of the Port McStocker, who was here investigating opium snuggling, hurried back to the islands, hoping to anticipate the plans of the smugglers. By the mail, which arrived here previous to that of the Alameda, there came a letter from Deputy McStocker to the customs officers here, stating that a vessel answering to the description of the Norma had been hovering about the neighboring island, but could not be overhauled because of the government's lack of a proper boat. It is now believed that the vessel was the Norma, but that, instead of having opium aboard, she in reality was loaded with arms.

The arrival here a few weeks ago of Col. Macfarland on the steamer Arawa, and his sudden departure the same day on the steamer Australia is also regarded as having had something to do with the preparations of the Royalists. The colonel said that his visit was simply a personal one, but shortly after he arrived here it was learned that he had réceived several telegrams from Victoria. It is now believed that he came here to learn something about the Norma, and, being advised that ahe was already on her way to the islands, he hurried home that same afternoon.

Mrs. Coates, a widow, died last night and, in a deathbed confession, raised the curtain of mystery from the whole affair. Mrs. Coates's story is that she and Wintermyer started to a dance and were walking along the railway when Wintermyer started to a dance and were myer made unwarrantable proposals to her, whereupon she started to return home, but he laid hold, of her to detain her. In the struggle which ensued Wintermyer tripped and fell, striking his head on a stone. Before he could recover she seized an ax, which some tie-makers had left at that place, and struck him with it. One moment's reflection presented the enormity of the crime to her and she dragged the body to the track only a few yards distant and taid it upon the rails. Senator Manderson presented the cre-dentials of John M. Thurston, elected as a United States Senator from Nebraska for the term beginning March 4 next. language, but had merely offered a suggestion."
"In order to facilitate the passage of the resolution," continued Senator Frye, "and in order that it may be at once subject to the Hawaiian Islands, I will accept the proposal to change it."

The presiding officer was about to put the question and it seemed as though the resolution would pass without a word of protest, when Mr. Gray of New Jersey interposed an objection. "I do not object to the first part of the resolution," said he, "but the last part seems inappropriate at this time."

interposed an objection. "I do not object to the first part of the resolution," said he, "but the last part seems inappropriate at this time."

"Then," said Mr. Frye, "let us proceed to the consideration of the first. I will modify the resolution accordingly.

Mr. Caffery of Louisiana rose at this point. "Is this not rather premature?" he asked. "We are not yet informed as to the facts on which the resolution is predicated. The press reports tell us this morning that there has been an emeute in the Hawaiian Islands, but whether there has been an effort to restore the Queen to her throne I do not know. I ask the Senator from Maine to tell us if he has any information on that point."

Mr. Frye was again on his feet. "I must say," he proceeded, "that since I have read in the morning papers that the Secretary of State says that he can take no action until he receives official communication as to the outbreak; that while the Secretary of the Navy can order warships to those islands he would not act until so requested by the Secretary of State, I can consent to no further change or modification in this resolution."

Again the presiding officer was about to put the question when Mr. George or Modification in this resolution."

Mr. Frye faced about to the Democratic side and looked steadily at Mr. George. "God may forgive the Senator who makes that objection," said Mr. Frye, each word coming with measured deliberation, "but I do not believe that the American people will forgive him."

There was an oppressive psuse of a moment. Senators looked at each other ominously as Mr. Frye's words echoed through the chamber. Mr. George had risen slow of, his face Susbed and showing intense fe ling. "Such a remark is improper and unworthy of

Mr. George insisted on his objection and, under the rules, the resolution was laid aside.

Senator Lodge of Massachusetts them gave notice of an intention to call up the resolution offered by Mr. Aldrich on the 9th inst., saying that such a course was made necessary by the objection which had been made to the consideration of other resolutions. The rescuttion is as follows:

"Resolved, that the Senate of the United 'Resolved, that the Senate of the United States, having in view public interests and those of the American citizens residing in the Hawaiian Islands, is of the opinion that our government should be represented in Hawaiian wa ters by one of more ships of its navy."

At this point there was a break in the discussion of the Hawaiian question, brought about by Senator Cockrell, chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, by the introduction of a report on the Urgency Deficiency Bill. Finally Senator Chandler moved a postponement of the conference report, which was postponed until 2 o'clock.

Senator Lodge contended that the Hawaiian business was of far more importance than the inflection of the focometax on the country. He could not retrain from pointing to the verification furnished by the uprising reported in today's papers of the predictions that had been made by Admiral Walker, in his report, and by himself in his remarks made in the Senate, based upon that report.

The admiral had made the point that the withdrawal of the American ships from Hawaiian waters would make the impression upon the native mind that this government was in sympathy with the Royalists and in favor of the restoration of the Queen. In his comments, Senator Lodge had pointed out that, so far as the result has been effected, it would not matter whether they were right or wrong in reaching this conclusion. It would, in either case, be liable to encourage an uprising.

Admiral Walker also expressed the opinion that in case of an uprising, the present government would be able to maintain itself, and this prediction had also happily been verified.

Mr. Lodge referred to the portion of the pily been verified.

Mr. Lodge referred to the portion of the President's message bearing upon the landing of the British cable on the Hawaiian Islands, as a covert reference to Admiral Walker, who was his own witness, and proceeded to comment upon the fact that "the intelligent diplomatic agent" to whom the President had referred, had been a prompt to distribute the side. so prompt to distrow the views of the admiral. He also called attention to the statements in today's dispatches concerning the alleged readiness of the British miral. He also called attention to the statements in today's dispatches concerning the alleged readiness of the British Consul to recognize the revolutionary government in case of its being able to hold the place for three hours. He did not mean to imply that the British were doing more than seeking by the agressiveness which Great Britain shows in all such matters to extend the commercial supremacy of that country in Hawaii.

He criticized the administration not only for the withdrawel of the American ships, but for its first efforts to sustain the Royalists, and also complained of what he considered the efforts of the Democratic Senators to prevent immediate consideration of the question by technical objections and privileged reports. In view of the facts developed in today's dispatches, the Senate should not longer delay in the expression of sympathy with the Republican course in Hawaii, in extending its congratulations on the strength which the existing government had shown, and in declaring for an American policy of administration.

Mr. George said he had based his objections on the ground that the information furnished was insufficient to proceed in the manner indicated by the resolution. He characterized the Hawaiian affairs as a "little riot in which only two or three people were killed," and said that no American's property been destroyed. Hence, he thought it wise that the Senate should delay action for further information. He said, in reply to questions by Mr. Teller, that the Senate aho nothing to do with the right of the President as commander-inchief of the army and navy in his disposal of those forces, and "we are not," said he, "called upon with all our powers to give advice in the premises."

Mr. George said the present Hawaiian government was one of force. It had secured its place by force and it was bound to maintain itself by force. There was no obligation on the United States to maintain that government. It might maintain lives and property of American citizens in Hawaii, but the lives and

Mr.-Caffery of Louisiana said that, from the published reports, the uprising was a fizzle, a flasco. It had shown only one thing, that the existing government was amply able to sustain itself. "The policy of the President of the United States toward the felands has been marked by the utmost wisdom and sagacity." said Mr. Caffery.

Mr. Frye then secured the passage of a resolution asking the Secretary of the Navy for information as to the surveys made of Pearl Harbor by Admiral Walker. At this point, the hour of 2 o'clock arrived and, as the Senate had previously fixed this time for hearing eulogies on the late Senator Vance of North Carolina, the Hawaiian resolution was laid aside. The tributes were heartfelt and eloquent. When they were concluded the Senate, as a further mark of respect to the deceased, adjourned.

The House then went into committee of the whole and resumed consideration of the Indian Appropriation Bill.

After some debate Mr. Boutelle got the floor to offer a resolution on the Hawalian affair. He made an impassioned speech, which Mr. McCreary (Dem.) of Kentucky vainly tried to interrupt.

Mr. Boutelle, whose words gushed like a torrent, said:

"I am not going into details on this

I know that there is no sympathy on the part of the American people, or in the hearts of the American people, or in the hearts of the American Congress, either on the Republican or Democratic side, outside of a small coterie that could be counted upon the fingers of my hand, for the policy which has led directly up to this tragedy in Hawaii.

"Today I learned that one of my dearest young friends, a young man of American lineage, with blood that runs back to Boston on the one hand and through the missionary stock that went there and recemed these islands from barbarism upon the other, has fallen, fighting to defend his home and directed against an insurrection, stimulated by the adherents of a discredited monarchy, and encouraged, I reget to say, by the action of the executive government of the United States, in removing from the harbor of Honolulu the last vestige of the moral support and sympathy of the people of the United States."

At this point the Speaker announced that, under a special rule, the remainder of the day would be devoted to eulogies on the late Representative Lyle of Kentucky.

Mr. Boutelle sought vainly to have the order set aside temporarily until a resolution he desired to offer be considered. When the Speaker rapped for order, he continued his appeal until, amid great confusion, the Speaker was obliged to order him to be seated, and to instruct the sergeant-at-arms to enforce the order of the chair. The Lyle eulogies were then delivered. Then, at 3:15 p.m., as a further mark of respect to the memory of the deceased, the House adjourned.

He Takes His Horses from Bay District Track After Denouncing Tom Williams and Calling in His Loan.

By Telegraph to The Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 19.—(Special Dispatch.) The withdrawal of Adolph Spreckels's string of racers from the Jockey Club quarters today was preceded by a lively row late last night, at the Palace Hotel, between Spreckels and Williams. Spreckels has been much irritated by the way handicaps have been placed on his horses, so he determined to get out. The talk of Williams and his followers angered him, and he demanded the $6300 which he had loaned the club.

Williams was wroth and called Spreckels last night with the check. Williams got so hot his hand trembled and his collar melted, and Spreckels was the antithesis of an iceberg himself. During the suspension of the rules the ex-vice-president of the club passed severe strictures upon the president, accusing him of surrounding himself with a party of "graftters," who were playing fast and loose with the sport-loving people of San Francisco and running racing into the ground.

"But for my name," retorted Williams "there would be no racing in 'Frisco." "And but for my money," replied Spreck els, "your name wouldn't amount to much matter." This bit of repartee is picked at randon from the expurgated report of the conver sation. After Williams had taken his de parture Spreckels said to friends who were present during the conversation: "Just t show you how badly I need this money

I'll let you see what I intend to do with it. Then he sat down and wrote two checks ne for $3150 in favor of the Protestan Orphan Asylum, and the other, represent ing a like amount, in favor of the Catholi Orphan Asylum. SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 19.—The most valuable importation of brood mares ever brought to California has arrived at the Rancho del Paso, the largest Breeding farm in the world.

There were ten in the car, eight of English breeding. George R. Easton, the famous auctioneer, came across the continent with the consignment of thoroughbreds. The breeding of several of the future matrons at Rancho del Paso is ultrafashionable, and as they are to be mated to Sir Modred, Salvator, Midlothian end other celebrated stallions at the big rance, California is likely to produce many another Dr. Hosbrouck, Sir Walter or Waltzer in the near future.

One of the most aristocratically-bred of the consignment is Spirit of the Times, by Rosierucian or the Rake, dam Lady Palmer. This mare is in foal to Imported Ormer, son of Ben d'Or, the sire of Ormonda, Another mare is What Not, by Chippendale, dam by Wenlock, the sire of the Cam of Isinglass and Islington. A third mare is Lady Cardigan, in foat to Imported Order. There is also a bay mare by Halbran, dam Moonbeam. Halbran is a full brother to Galilard, the sire of Vigor, who is now racing at the Bay District track. Merry Lass is an English mare by Merryworth, dam by Birdcatcher.

The American mares are Queen's Taste, by Rotherhill, in foal to Cavalier, a son of Frince Charlie, the sire of Salvator, and a bay mare by Blue Eyes, dam Dilemma. Easton, who brought the mares to California, is a brother of William Easton of the American Horse Exchange.

In the row that followed, in which some of the spectators engaged with the skaters, Joe Donoghue struck Davidson on the nose, bringing blood. There was bad feeling all around, and it was with difficulty that the row was stopped. There were ten entries for the nine-mile race, but there was so much bad feeling that no one would start except Rudd. He skated the distance alone, making it in 39m. 9s.

This is on Top of His Income of Eighty-five Thousand Dollars— Gambling and Theatrical Speculation.

By Telagraph to The Times.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—(Special Dispatch.) The Sun's London correspondent cables that Lord Francis Hope, brother of the Duke of Newcastle, and heir presump-tive to the dukedom, was married the other day to May Yohe, the young actress, part of his honeymoon in Frowsy, the un-romantic precincts of bankruptcy courts. The proceedings showed that he badly needed some one to look after him, and he ought to be thankful that he has now got a clever young woman as his wife, who will be able to keep him out of the hands of money-lenders if any one can. This young aristocrat came of age in 1887 and, during the past seven years, although he enjoyed an income of $55,000, he has managed to accumulate debts of $3,250,000. This is considered a fine performance, of which a British nobleman might be proud, and which gets within measurable distance of the record estab-lished by that famous rake and gambler the Marquis of Hastings, more than a gen-eration ago. Lord Hope declares that he kept well within his income as regards personal living expenses, but he was handi-capped at the start with the payment of $215,000 succession duty, and in seven years incurred $222,930 liabilities for others and paid $80,000 interest to money-lenders.

The Registrar elicited further facts of betting and gambling debts to the amount of $25,000 for seven years and debts in theatrical speculations of $120,000, two items which indicated the real causes of his lordship's troubles.

13, at Racine, still fewer and more scattering was the crowd which turned out to hear him, and on January 15, at Jollet, Ill., the audience was so fearfully small that the ex-Gov. hurled his last shaft, packed his grip and came home.

"The meetings were a failure," said Waite last night, "but I could not expect anything else. Yes, the tour has been abandoned. There were circumstances to militate against its success. Two circumstances worked against the success of the tour. One is that our kind of people are poor. As a rule they have no surplus at all. The other reason is the animosity which prevails among Republicans and many Democrats of strong goldbug sentiments against four governors—Pennoyer, Altgeld, Lewelling and myself. This feeling is because they think we are in earnest. We were not only fighting the money power, but we meant business. They don't care how radical a man's talk is if he is not able and does not mean to touch Wall street; but because I tried to carry out populistic measures and meant business they hate me as they do the others."

BERLIN, Jan. 19.—(By Atlantic Cable.) The news of the great colitical changes in Paris was received in Berlin with less amazement and disquiet than might have been expected from the peculiar relations existing between the two countries.

Emperor William, as cabled to the Associated Press at the time, went to the French embassy on Wednesday last on foot and had a long conference with the French Ambassador, M. Herbette, during which he expressed his regret at the resignation of Casimir-Perier. But Prince Hohenlohe, at the parliamentary reception held the same evening, discussed the political situation in France with a large group of his guests. The Chancellor spoke quite freely, and, in alluding to the chances of the various candidates for the Presidency, declared that the crisis was less grave and alarming than some of those present believed. Publicly, by leading politicians here, the news from Frances is treated in the same manner, the only exception to this rule being in the case of the Socialist party, whose members tried to create the impression that a great "krach" or collapse had at last come in France.

Emperor William has been exceedingly busy during the plast week. A series of court festivities has now fairly begun. The great coronaction festival occurs in Excel for the great the super or Sunday, January 27, and preparations for its celebration are aiready under way. A special programme has been arranged at the Royal Operahouse. Since the Emperor advent in Berlin he resides party at the royal castle in his own suite of rooms and party in the small Chateau Bellevue, in the heart of Thorgarten, where als two eldest sons, the Crown Prince, and Effetie Frederick, are permanently domiciled with their teachers.

the neart of Thorgarten, where als two eldest sons, the Crown Prince, and Ettel Frederick, are permanently domiciled with their teachers.

The Emperor has sent a aumber of his own drawings representing warships of the latest construction to the national library of the Reichstag, each design being marked "Wir, Wilhlem, Imperator Rex." The Emperor has just ordered from the Germania shippards a twenty-rater racing yacht for the coming season. A number of the yacht clubs of Berlin, Hamburg and Stettin have given similar orders, and next summer a great yachting meeting is to take place. Berlin yachts for the first time will make the trip entirely by water, which will be possible after the opening of the Baltic Canal. The Emperor personally will offer more than one prize to be competed for by the German yachtsmen.

The demand of Emperor William that ten or a dozen fast cruisers be added to the German navy will, judging from the feeling expressed by the, members of the Reichstag, be adopted without much trouble. The Hamburg Chamber of Commerce supports the scheme in its annual report, in which it declares that such an increase is necessary in order to strengthen German Influence abroad and facilitate the extension of the colonies of Germany. An imperial decree will be issued imposing the duty upon each lieutenant in the army to indertake at least once every two years a long ride on horseback. The Emperor will give prizes to each army corps for the best achievement.

Considerable comment has been caused by the particular pains which the Emperor took to testify his friendship for Schouvaloff on the latter's leaving his post as Russian Ambassador at Berlin. His Majesty gave the leaven the content of the signature in rubles. In presenting this handsome gift to the retiring ambassador, the Emperor said: "I give it to you as a friend, and not as the Emperor."

On Wednesday last the Emperor went alone and unannounced to the Russian embassy with the diamond decorations of the Order of the Bisck Eagle, which he had bestowed upon Schouvaloff.

During the dinner which may be the control of the part of the part with the diamond decorations of the Order of the Black Eagle, which he had bestowed upon Schouvaloff.

During the dinner which Emperor William gave to the diplomatic corps on Tuesday last His Majesty, who was sitting opposite Mrs. Runyon, wife of the United States Ambassador, expressed admiration for her splendidly-cut-diamonds.

"They are American cut diamonds, Your Majesty," said Mrs. Runyon.

"Yes. I notice," rejoined he, smiling, "that America is beginning to beat us in more ways than one."

Baroness Von Schroeder, nee Donohue, of San Francisco, gave a dinner to Ambassador and Mrs. Runyon on Wednesday last, and on the following day Mr. and Mrs. Runyon entertained a number of Americans at dinner. The chances of the passage of the anti-revolutionary bill have not improved. The repeal of the Jesuit law was authorized by the Reichstag, but the whole government party, the Conservatives and National Liberal parties, as well as the Radicals, opposed the motion, and it is likely that the Bundesrath will again nullify the Reichstag's decision. The Centrists, therefore, will reisse to support the anti-revolution bill, and the Voerwaerts (Socialist) already rejoices over what it declares to be the certain rejection of the measure.

it declares to be the certain rejection of the measure.

Sophia Harrison, after appearing at the winter garden here with her four sisters, for months past, eloped on Friday with Count von Bernstorenoff, formerly an officer of the Prussian Cavalir. A dispatch today announces their arrival and marriage at Fleuron. The manager of the winter garden and the husband of the eldest of the Harrison sisters, have asked the police to assist them in recovering damages for breach of contract. The government has expelled from Silesia two Mormon agitators and ambiter, William Tobler, of Santa Clarkette and ambiter, William Tobler, of Santa Clarkette is wanted by the total contract of the Building Committee of Reichstag respecting the inscription to be placed on the facade of the new Reichstag palace was announced today. Instead of being to "The German Nation," it will be to "The German Empire."

Statement of the Commercial Bank Feeding the Hungry.

ST JOHNS (N. F.,) Jan. 19.—The statement of the Commercial Bank shows as-sets of $1,463,000, and liabilities of $2,011,-000. To be deducted from these assets is a preferential payment of $416,000 to be a preferential payment of $416,000 to be made to the Savings Bank.

The difficulty of feeding the hungry is daily becoming greater. Representatives of all the city clergy have held a meeting and decided to issue an appeal to the world for help. A committee was appointed consisting of clergy of all denominations. The Rev. Mr. Graham is the secretary and to him all correspondence may be addressed.

The government will adjourn the Legislature on Monday. No measure dealing with the destitution has been adopted, the present financial difficulties preventing any action.

FOR SENATOR.

A Close Race Between Sweet and

BOISE (Idaho.) Jan. 19 .- Gov. McConnel BOISE (IGANO,) Jan. 13.—GOV. McConneil today sent to the Legislature a vigorous recommendation in favor of a memorial to Congress, praying for the passage of the Hartman mine railroad bill.

On the ballot for Senator today, there were a number of absentees. The Shoup men were paired with two of Shoup's supereters and one Shoup and four Swepters. porters, and one Shoup and four Sweet men were absent. The result was: Sweet, 16; Shoup, 13. The Populists again stood for Clagget.

FOR SALE—AT POMONA.

Before getting down to business, I wish to remark thatemeny jokes were perpetrated during the recent campaign about the name of our present Governor. Bud." It went the rounds that the "bud would never blossom." But if you hear my gentie voice, that Bud will be in full bloom, and that, too, before the present session of the Legislature adjourns. If he keeps up the lick that he has shown in the past week, but the down in the past week, but the local state of the Legislature and the sum of the legislature should be disinfecting business on a wholesale plan that will make evideors tremble, and right they should. For Boilties, rotten politics, are a curse to this grand State, and have been for years. Let the leaders not stop, but for hands with San Francisco in the present movement and never let up till they have rid this country from the graap of that great octopus, the Southern Pacific of Kentucky.

Bud, as the head of this State, can have more to do with the success of this movement than any one olse.

There's my sentiments, and that better day is coming. In the meantime, how would you like to pick up a few bargains? For instance, just 1 mile east of the positoffice at Pomona is located 20 acres, all set to olives and prunes: about one-half of each, mostly in bearing, extending from First st. to Fifth ave.: I know the income from this piace in 2 different years to run over 3300: the whole orchard can be purchased for 10.300, easy terms if desirci; this is truly a bargain; come and see it.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 19, 1895.
Bradstreet's table of bank clearances in the principal cities of the country, as telegraphed from New York on the 18th inst., shows an increase for the whole country of 6.7 per cent., or, exclusive of New York, of 4.5 per cent: Los Angeles shows up to great advantage in this statement. Of the eighty-one cities reported there are only two which show a greater percentage of in crease. These are St. Louis, with 89 per cent., and Fort Worth with 63 per cent., Los Angeles having 49.9 per cent. One city which was a leading competitor of Los Angeles a few years ago—Tacoma—is not now "in it" at all, showing clearances of less than half a million dollars in comparison with over a million and a quarter for Los Angeles. Tacoma shows a decrease Or., which for a long time was regularly ahead of Los Angeles, is also behind in the race for the week, showing clearances of only a little over $1,000,000. The Times of only a little over $1,000,000. The Times has shown on several occasions how it is that these bank clearings do not offer a fair evidence of the relative importance of the banking business conducted in Los Angeles as compared with other cities. A larger amount of business is conducted in Los Angeles on a cash basis than is usual in cities of this size, beside this, it happens that a majority of the wealthy depositors in this city patronze one bank. Under similar conditions Los Angeles would show up in the clearings much more favorably than many cities of several times its size.

The continued wet weather is not only interfering with the marketing of the orange crop, but is stopping the seeding of grain in some sections of Southern Cali-fornia. From the northern part of the State it is reported that several thousand acres of grain are likely to be destroyed by floods. A little bright sunshine now would be a good thing all around.

would be a good thing all around.

A good many reforms are urgently demanded by merchanis in this city. It remains to be seen whether any good resolutions will follow the meeting at the Board of Trade, which was recently held, when resolutions were unanimously adopted demanding modifications of several State laws. The chief of the suggested changes are that unrecorded deeds shall not in future prevail against judgments or attachments, since under the existing law merchants are induced to give credit to parties by the circumstances that certain property stands in their names, and are thus, in fact, made the victims of fraud; that voluntary conveyances or gifts by insolvency, shall be invalid against legitimate creditors; that no discharge shall be granted to insolvents whose assets net less than 40 per cent. of their unsecured indebtedness, but that insolvents whose estates yield so much or more shall be allowed 5 per cent. (up to a maximum of 51000) of the assets; that homesteads shall be limited to $1000, and subject to prior debts; that the period of limitation of debts on open accounts shall be extended four years, and on notes to five years, in each case from the days of the last payment, if any.

It is urged by some of the retailers in this city, that the resolutions do not go far enough, but that more facilities are required for the collection of small debts. Commenting upon this feature of the case the Commercial Bulletin says:

ouired for the collection of small debts. Commenting upon this feature of the case the Commercial Bulletin says:

"We remark particularly in the proposals of the Board of Trade, the absence of any demand for the summary disposal of small claims, say those for less than $50, at a single hearing by the appropriate courts, fixed on the issue of the summons, and not more than fourteen days following it, without adjournment, or the use of elaborate forms, or the necessary employment oracte forms, or the necessary employment of counsel, and without appeal. Such jur-isdiction is, we believe universal in Europe, and it is the only one that can generally speaking; give the retail dealers a chance to recover the sums owing to them. To render it thoroughly effective of course every exemption should be about of course every exemption should this hed, and the attachment of all ished, and the attachment of all wages permitted, and this is a line of action which we recommend to the Merchants' Association, as more directly representing the retailer than the Board of Trade pro-fesses to do."

The Los Angeles clearings for the past week were $1,006,673 against $770,356 for the corresponding week of last year, an increase of 30.7 per cent.

GENERAL BUSINESS TOPICS. In discussing the question of the min-eral resources of Southern California it is generally taken for granted that there is no iron ore in this section in sufficient quantity to be of commercial value. This opinion is, however, by no means well founded. At a recent session of the Southern California Science Association the paper of the evening was read by Warren Wilson, and was entitled "Iron Deposits in the Southwest." He handled the topic in a very interesting manner, both from a scientific and commercial point of view. He stated that there are large deposits of iron ore in Southern California, Arizona and Southern Utah. He particularly described a large body of magnetic Iron ore lying twenty miles from the Santa Fe Railroad in San Bernardino county, southeast of Daggett. He said there was enough ore in sight to supply California for a hundred years. Some of it had been shipped to San Francisco and had entered into the construction of the battleship Monterey. The main difficulty in the development of this ore mass is suitable fuel, and the speaker intimated that it might be made possible to use the petroleum now entering the market so abundastly, for that purpose. Another speaker remarked that the best fuel for the smelting of iron ore was charcoal, and that the eucalptus produced the very best quality of charcoal, but he also thought that there was a possibility of utilizing petroleum.

Wholesale Quotations Revised Daily.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 19, 1896.

The market in all lines of produce is dull, for which alone the continuous rains are responsible. The absence of the usual receipts from interior points keeps stocks down so that although business is quiet, prices are not weak. Dairy products are above quotations, but dealers will not mark up prices, knowing that the scarcity is only temporary. The butter market was pretty well cleaned up, but steamer arrivals this morning from the North have helped to keep the market steady so that there is little or no change in quotations. Unless the present rains hold up by Monday vegetables of all kinds will be marked up. In the meantime staple varieties are in step with the demand. Fresh meats in wholesale carcasses are higher, with the exception of pork, which, at 6 to 6½ is unchanged. There is nothing unisual in this advance in prices. Feed just now is high and grass cattle have not yet come in. Hay arrivals are not plentiful, but prices continue steady at quotations. Wholesale Quotations Revised Daily.

NEW YORK MARKETS. Shares and Money.

Associated Press Leased-wire Service.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—The share speculation has been heavy in tone all day on a very light volume of business and prices, a decline from yesterday's final sales, rang-ing from ¼ to 2% per cent. The heaviness profits of the recent advance, except in one or two instances, in which special influences were at work all week. A case in point is Union Pacific, which sold heavily on the re-Union Pacific, which sold heavily on the reported intention to foreclose the property, and on a vague rumor that a 30 per cent assessment on the stock was probable. Near the close of business the Associated Press dispatches announced the making of an application at St. Louis for the foreclosure of the first mortgage and the appointment of separate receivers for the main line, and the stock broke 1½ and closed at the lowest point touched. Chicago Gas was weak oa, selling, induced by the complications resulting from the effort to change the control of the compales. An early advance of ½ per cent, was made, which was quickly followed by a decline of 1½ per cent, making the loss on the day 1 per cent. Lacided Gas preferred advanced 1 per cent. Lacided Gas preferred advanced 1 per cent. and reacted 1½ per cent. The Grangers opened lower, reacted a shade, made a partial recovery and in the final dealings fell off again, except Rock Island, which stands unchanged on the day. Burlington is down ½. Northwest ¾ and St. Paul ½, the latter being sold by London. Sulfy the latter being sold by London. Sulfy the latter being sold by London the day's transactions. The market closed duil and heavy in tone. During the week, while the trading was very light, the market was in the main strong, and in a majority of cases an advance has been recorded on the closing figures of Saturday last. The aggregate of the sales is 563,000 shares. Chicago Gas leading in point of activity. The aggregate of the sales is 563,000 shares. Chicago Gas leading in point of activity. The aggregate of the sales is 638,000 shares. Chicago Gas leading in point of activity. The aggregate of the sales is 618,000 shares. Chicago Gas leading in point of activity. The specialities were more active than usual and a majority recorded substantial advances. The Grangers were adversely affected by the action of the United States Senate in postponing consideration in the early part of the week, but recovered the losses with the exception of St. Paul, which is ½ per c ported intention to foreclose the property

Paul, which is ½ per cent off. While the bulk of trading in the day's bond market was lower, the recessions did not exceed fractional limits. The dealings were light and reached only $394,000. The transactions for the week in the bond market aggregate $6,242,200, the Atchison issues being most preminent therein, and recorded an improvement in the fours of 2% and in the seconds of 1%, with a final reaction of 1¼ and 1 per

CHICAGO, Jan. 19.—The clearances of wheat and flour from both coasts this week, as published by Bradstreet's, helped to suitain the courage of holders of wheat here at the start. The quantity exported was 3,564,000 bushels, compared with 2,587,000 last week, and 1,362,000 on the corresponding week of the year before. The receipts were light as been usual of late, and as compared with the movement a year ago. The trading was also light. Cables were dull. Primary market receipts were 224,000 bushels compared with 316,000 a year ago. Export clearances from the Atlantic seaboard were small, with 216,000 a year ago. Export clearances from the Atlantic seaboard were small, amounting to only 210,000 bushels of wheat and flour together, of which only 18,474 were in the shape of wheat and 16,000 of that went from New Orleans. The opening prices for May wheat were the highest of the day, 57%, with 1000 or 2000 bushel iots at 57%; it declined to 57% and closed at 57% bid. Corn was very dull and quiet, the prices of May declining ½ per bushel in the course of the session and closing with a net loss for the day of 56. Shorts appeared to be the principal buyers at the decline. The opening price for May was 47%, and 1000 bushels at least sold at low as 47%, the latest trading price. The oat market attracted some attention early in the session, when the price fell off % under free offerings. It did not last long, however, and during the greater part of the session fluctuations were influenced by corn. The day's business averaged fairly good for a Saturday. May started at from 30%, 30%, at which price bid the market closed. The provision trade apparently saw nothing to induce speculative transactions, and therefore did nothing or as little as possible. May pork and lard closed at 21% decline from yesterday's closing prices and ribs finished unchanged.

CHICAGO, Jan. 19.—In cattle today receipts were estimated at 1000, making 59,000 for the week, against 57,851 for last week. Trade was quiet and values unchanged. Spring steers sold on a basis of 3.2563.75; stockers and feeders from 2.25663.25; and cows and bulls at 1.5903.50. Hog receipts were estimated at 16,000 making about 230,000 for the week, or 13,300 more than last week. Sales were generally at 2.9004.10 for averages of less than 200 pounds, and largely at 4.2564.35 for heavier weights. The number of hogs on sale was about 33,000, of which 17,000 were the leavings of Friday. There was a good demand for sheep and lambs, and the market was fairly steady at 2.0062.30 for poor to extra qualities of the former, and 2.5664.50 feather latter. Today's receipts were 3000, and the total for the week reaches 62,000, as against 69,600 for last week.

PRACTICABLE ROADS VERSUS PAPER ROADS.

Perhaps, after the gentlemen who have taken up the task of constructing a line of railroad from Los Angeles into the San Joaquin Valley shall have experimented for a few months and have found out how many difficulties lie in the way of carrying out the project, as outlined at the recent meeting, they may come to the conclusion that, after all. the suggestion made a few weeks ago by The Times is the right one and the most practical one, namely that each county should build, not a railroad, but a highway, from its northern to its southern boundary. Then the right could be granted to a company to lay tracks and operate cars of any description on this highway.

At the meeting in the Chamber of Commerce rooms the project of Se ator Mathews for the State to build a line from Siskiyou to San Diego was indorsed. The Times has expressed a doubt-an honest doubt-as to whether such a measure would be contitutional. The counties at one time had the right to bond themselves for the purpose of building or aiding the nstruction of railroads. Several of them exercised this power with great liberality when the Central Pacific ructed, and Lo geles county did the same at a later date, on behalf of the Southern Pacific em. After the Southern Pacific Company had received about all it ed-or about all it thought it could get-in the line of subsidies from the counties, it secured the passage of a law forbidding these countles to bond themselves for railroad purposes Whether the great corporation which controls a majority of the products and a large percentage of the politic of the State has been so shortwighted as to leave a loophole for action in this direction by the State, after the counties had been "fixed," is very doubtful.

However, even supposing that ther is no legal obstacle in the way of the Mathews bill, does any one who has resided in California for a few years really suppose that the time has arrived when a California legislature would pass a measure that would be less than a slap in the face of Collis P. Huntington? We are aware that the State is not lying so abjectly at the feet of Mr. Huntington as it did for many years. With the growth of population, and especially of immigraon from the Eastern States, there has arisen a strong spirit of opposition to the continuance of a rule which has demoralized California politically and commercially for a quarter of a century. The dawn is breaking, but the sun has not yet risen. It will probably several years yet before a Califor nia legislature will be found independent enough to authorize the construc tion of a line of railroad which would make serious competition with the Southern Pacific Company, even supsing that the legislature has the to do so. We should be pleased find that we are mistaken in this surmise. Meantime, as The Times pointed out, there is a simple method by which a competing line of railroad might be established at small and within a very moderate od of time. As was suggested The Times when discussing the cty, let each county interested in rallroad proposition issue bonds ning a short time and bearing a rate of interest, redeemable in county taxes at the end of the term There are plenty of idle men around now and labor can be had at a very noderate rate. With the money raised a good highway could be built through each county from north to south. The ultimate cost to each county would be small, because by the time the bonds became payable the increase in value of the adjacent land and the taxes thereon would be sufficient to cover the cost of the road. The right could then be granted to a responsible company, which might be composed chiefly of property-owners and producers along the line of the road, to lay rails and operate cars. The rails could be light ones and the motive power either steam, or electricity in some parts of the mountain ous sections where a water supply could be developed to generate the electricity. Such a power would cost little or nothing after it was developed, as the water could afterward be sold for irrigation purposes. Such power could be conducted to a considerable distance. In the foothills of Kern county there is an enormous amount of such power which is now going to vaste. On other sections of the road, if it should be found cheaper, petroleum could be used to generate steam. The advantage of such a road, run by electricity, would be that it would be vastly cheaper than a regular steam railroad. The grades could be much heavier, which makes a great difference in crossing mountain ranges. The line might be a narrow guage one from Los Angeles to tidewater at Stockton. Even a tram car, drawn by mule, could compete in the way of charges with those which are exacted by the Southern Pacific Company in the San Joaquin Valley. The company which obtained a franchise for operating such a road would be bound in the agreement to certain limits of freight rates.

The Times suggests that there is a much more likelihood of accomplishing something definite in this manner than by passing resolutions indorsing the Mathews bill, or by trying to raise $4,500,000.

SENATOR WHITE AND SAN PE-DRO.

The Times is in receipt of frequent letters from correspondents criticising Senator Stephen M. White with more or less vigor because of the neglect on the part of the Senate Commerce Committee to take action in the San Pedro harbor matter. As Mr. White is a member of that committee, it is held that he has it within his power to induce action at any time, and that in refraining from so doing he is neglecting the interests of Southern California in general, and those of Los Angeles in particular.

The Times has taken a similar view of the matter, and has been disposed to urge upon Senator White the necessity for pushing this question to a de termination at the present session of Congress. But advices just received from the Times representative Washington who has special and reliable inside means of information, indicate that the policy which Senator White is pursuing is, under the circumstances, wiser than a more aggressive course would be.

It is undoubtedly true that Senator White could bring the harbor question before the committee for consideration at almost any time. But if such consideration should result in adverse action, the interests of San Pedro would suffer more thereby than they will suffer through delay, which at most will be only temporary. It appears from information in possession of The Times that a majority of the Commerce Committee, as at present constituted, (and we have the result of a "count of noses") while not actu ally opposed to San Pedro, cannot be depended upon to vote for that site if a vote be forced at this time. Senator Ransom, chairman of the committee. is committed to the idea of a Senaforial funket, to inspect the two har bor sites, and others of the committee are of the same mind. It is difficult to understand what ground these Senators can find to stand upon, in assuming such an attitude in the face of three unanimous reports in favor of San Pedro by as many boards of expert government engineers. But the fact remains that they hold to that position, and would vote against San Pedro if a vote were forced. An adverse report would be fatal under present conditions

The situation being as it is, Senator White is obviously right in refraining from aggressive action. At least two embers of the committee who are hostile to San Pedro will go out of office at the end of the present session, and the committee will be reconstituted. There will also be an entire change in the House, which will very probably be favorable to San Pedro, as it is understood that the present House Committee is not to be depended upon for favorable action. Senator White's loyalty to the be interests of his constituents is beyond question. Being at the front, he doubtless understands the situation etter than it can be understood here. The delay is vexatious, not to say exasperating. But present delay is prefrable to ultimate defeat. Until it shall have convincing evidence to the contrary, The Times prefers to believe that Senator White is not only acting in good faith, in this matter, but is doing what is for the best.

JOHN BURNS.

Perhaps no untitled foreigner ever ame to our shores who was more generally discussed, or more cordially received by the masses than John Burns, the English labor leader. The intelligent and unprejudiced Am can workman realizes that he has had enough of leaders of the Debs stripe, oint where he feels that he wants a 'leader." He has made the great mis take of planting himself upon the proposition that society and govern-ment are the enemies of the workingnan, and are forever standing ready to take advantage of his neces nd to rob him of that which is justly his. Yet in America, especially, no more false and destructive theory than this could be brought forward for acceptance by the masses for in a republic, society—the mass of the -cannot afford to be, neither has it any desire to be, hostile to the workmen, who are a constituent part

Labor has been defined most aptly as "that exertion of man's powers which adapts things to some want, taste or desire of man." Therefore, every man who is a good citizen is in ome sense or other a workman. It matters not whether his work is per formed with the horny-hand of toil, or whether it consists of that more wearing and continuous labor of the creative brain, both are equally labor ers, and the relation between such workers is one of inter-dependence and he is no friend to so-called labor but an enemy to community at large who would stir up strife, create sus picion and strengthen the prejudices of the masses against capital.

And now what is the attitude of this self-styled "labor leader" who has come to our shores to teach free Amer ican citizens in what their rights con sist? Does he look with large open vision upon society, recognizing the equal rights of all classes, counseling forbearance under real or imaginary wrongs until such time as a prope adjustment of relations can be brought about through arbitration or the jus process of law? Not by any means! This foreign blatherskite and insolent alien counsels action where disagree ment arises between employer, and employee which is anything but in eeping with the spirit of our institutions and the rights and privileges of sovereign citizenship. Here is a story which fell boastingly from his own lips during the recent convention of the American Federation of Labor in Denver. It is given in an interview with a reporter:

"I was called," he says, "to take charge of a strike involving three systems of railways. The men had a just ause; but they had bungled frightfully in their management of affairs. I showed them one way out of it; namely, to attack one system at a time. The men on the other system refused to go back. Then I said: There is just one other way to compel victory. In a round-house at a certain point are 800 stokers and firemen. They are filling your places. Providentially, just opposite the round house is a brick yard. There a plenty of bricks. They are hard. I will take a thousand men. We will charge that round-house with a brick n each hand. Those fellows will run and be afraid to come back. Your strike is won.'

"Did they let you do it?" I asked. "No," he said, "they wouldn't even privately authorize me. I was willing o bear the entire responsibility and oick my men outside their ranks. They were afraid, and their strike

"Did you really intend to throw the

"Did I?" responds Burns, his eye gleaming like lightning under his shaggy brows. "Well, to be honest, I think the bluff would have been enough. We would have charged on the round-house and scared the life out of those fellows. But I want to tell you," he said in his most impressive manner, "that 'ad it a been ne essary to use those bricks, we'd a thrown evr'y bloomin' one o' them."

If we turn to the history of this man who comes here passing as the friend of labor, we learn that in the past two venrs he has led fifty strikes and een involved in four riots. In view of these facts, can it justly be claimed that he is a friend of order, or of legitimate methods for the advancement of the cause of labor? Is the man who openly declares that he ld, in defiance of law and of individual rights under law, resort to vio lence to win his purpose a safe leader for the American workman? Let the workingman as a sovereign citizen answer.

Mr. Burns, were he an American and attempted to carry into effect such threats as this, might land in an

The Mathews bill appears to have been devised with the purpose of evading both the letter and the spirit of the Constitution. It remains to be determined how far the attempt will be successful.

Budd's action in removing Alvord and Tobin, of the San co Police Board, will assist in or's power of removal and appointment, as regards this board, promptly before the Supreme Court. It is desirable that the questions involved should be quickly and authoritatively

Messrs. Alvord and Tobin refused to recognize Menzies, the man appointed by the Governor to succeed Gunst, hence they were at once removed; James V. Coleman and L. R. Ellert being appointed to succeed them. Whether the Governor is acting within his constitutional authority in making these arbitrary removals and appoint ments, remains to be judicially deter-

It is altogether against good policy or in the hands of any one man, the sutocratic power to remove public vithout cause, or unless such officials have been guilty of malfens-ance. If the Governor of this State, under existing laws, is vested with any such arbitrary power, he should be divested of it as quickly as possi-ble. Offitornia is not to be governed by one-man power, but by its Consti-

If in the present case the Supreme Court sustains the Governor's action, it will be because the Constitution and the laws, through inadvertence, have vested the Governor with unusual and extraordinary powers. No public official should be obliged to hold his tenure of office wholly at the caprice of another public official, though ample provisions should be made for impeachment or removal, for cause.

As regards the police commission ership of San Francisco, the govern ment of that city should have the sol power of appointment and removal. Municipal and county governments should be autonomous, so far as their local affairs are concerned. pointment or removal of local officials by the Governor should be made impossible. The Governor is the chief executive of the State, but should ave no executive powers in the purely local affairs of any municipality county, or township of the State. In cases where local and State affairs are merged, the State authority is su-

The aspect of the question here con-sidered has nothing to do with the fitness or unfitness of Gunst for the ffice to which he was appointed by Gov. Markham. If the Governor were to have power to remove and appoint officials at his pleasure, being himself the sole judge as to their fitness, what official would be safe from his caprice? It is generally conceded that the appointment of Gunst was a mistake, but it is doubtful if the Governor had legal power to remedy that mistake in the manner by which he has attempted to do so. The Legislature give early and earnest attention to this question.

RAILROADS AND HIGHWAYS.

Because it is practicable for counties to construct highways, it does not follow that it is practicable for counties to construct railways. The conditions of construction and operation are widely different as between wagon-roads and railroads. In the case of wagon-roads, all that is necessary to successful operation is a well-constructed roadbed, with moderate gradients. When a county has constructed such roads, its only further responsibility is to keep them in repairs. With railroads it is different The problems of equipment and operation are far more difficult than those of mere construction.

Furthermore, the question of through traffic is to be considered. Short railroad lines seldom pay expenses. The plan proposed Mathews bill contemplates the co-operation of several counties, with diverse interests and even more varied topog raphy, in a common scheme of traffic Whether such co-operation is possible whether all the varied interests can be harmonized and kept in harmony. certainly a debatable question.

The ill-success thus far attained by counties in the matter of highway construction and maintenance is cheerful augury for the vastly more complex and difficult scheme of railroad construction and operation con templated by the Mathews bill. The discussion of the question as to hether the school children shall be allowed to participate in La Fiesta parade has brought out a great deal of literary talent which might other wise have remained "to fortune and to fame unknown." The Times acknowledges the receipt of a lengthy metrical contribution to the literature of the subject which is after Longfel low (a long way.) It is also after the fellow who wants to have the children join in the festival. The crowder state of our columns this morning precludes the insertion of more than wo stanzas, and here they are:

Who is cranky then; please tell me? Not the parent who objects To the foolish waste of moments And the lessons sad neglect.

Many of the newspapers of the State are glibly discussing the pros and cons of a hypothetical "woman suffrage bill" which it is assumed is to be passed by the Legislature. The special Sacramento correspondent of a San Francisco paper thinks that "Gov. Budd would sign such a bill," and would thereby win the undying gratitude of all the women in the State Another able journal declares that Gov. Budd has intimated in no uncer tain terms that he will affix his offi cial signature "to a bill granting the suffrage to women." And so the discussion goes merrily on, the able editors and their correspondents (not to mention the Governor) being apparently in blissful ignorance of the fact; which every schoolboy should know that the Legislature has no more power to grant the suffrage to women in this State than it has to enfranchise the natives of Terra del Fuego Woman suffrage is possible only through an amendment to the State Constitution, and the utmost that the Legislature can do is to provide for submitting to the people an amendment to that effect.

The story of a strike is almost invariably a story of violence. In the Brooklyn street-car strike, the oft-told tale is repeated. Jeers at the militia, resistance of the police, maltreating of non-union workmen-these are the dis gusting accompaniments of the strike and the boycott. Such lawlessness alienates public sympathy from the strikers, and places organized society at once upon the defensive against organized disorder. The merits and de merits of a labor controversy are swept aside by the supreme necessity for the preservation of order and the if the telegraphed statement of the workmen's grievances be correct, there is much of justice in their demands. But the resort to violence is likely to defeat their cause. In such emer gencies, the suppression of violence becomes the paramount issue and the supreme duty, before which all considerations must be laid aside. If mob-law be allowed to rule, government by law is a failure. This truth is fundamental, obvious, and incontro vertible.

It is stated that the most profitable expenditure incurred by the British covernment was the purchase of the Khedive's shares in the Suez Canal, the net profit already having amounted to over $100,000,000. The Nicaragua Canal, when constructed and in operation, will doubtless carry a greater tonnage than that which passes through the Suez Canal. There is considerable difference of opinion as to the profits which the enterprise will yield, but it is conceded even by most of its opponents, that the invest ment will not be a losing one.

The administration's hasty action in ordering the warship Philadelphia to Honolulu is a tacit confession that a great blunder was committed when the vessel was ordered away from that port. Admiral Walker's report was a warning which should have been heeded. And it would have been heeded had Cleveland been less absorbed in his own pompous nothing-ness, and had Gresham been less wedded to his own imbecility.

An English journal says that the rade of Great Britain has been injuriously affected by "the formation of trusts, pools, and corners." This information, coming from such a source, will doubtless shock Prof. Wilson and his free-trade congeners, who have lost many sleepless nights in the effort to prove that all the trusts, pools and combines are located in protected America, and that they are unknown

Both the Legislature and the Govrnor are agreed that retrenchment in State expenditures are essential. With this common end in view, the object lesired can be accomplished if both these branches of the State government will sink party differences and work in harmony.

Southern California in Bad Shape, as is Also the South-ern Pacific.

Extensive Breaks Between Los An geles and San Diego, Cutting off All Communication—The

For a brief time yesterday afternoon it cemed as if the storm had broken, and the un shone intermitently, while patches of blue sky peeped out from the heavy pall of black clouds. The spirits of the railof black clouds. The spirits of the rail-read officials rose 50 per cent, for within the last forty-eight hours the dimeuties of the ordinary, every-day situation had been increased indefinitely. So far both the Southern Pacific and the Southern California companies are congratulating themselves that the obstructions to travel have been no worse, and in the absence of future mishaps in the early hours /his morning all the difficulties will be/re-morning all the difficulties will be removed today.

The Southern Pacific north-bound rain No. 18, detained Friday afternoon, was sent out yesterday morning at 8:0, so soon as news was received that the Tejunga break had been remediel. The regular north-bound train left at 2 o'clock, on time. The west-bound Sunset Limited was nearly two hours late last night. On its errival the private car Cleopatra and two Pullmans were cut out, and the train departed for the North.

The Redlands local ran only as far as Cofton. Four bents of the bridge spanning the Santa Ana River, close to Colton, were carried away, and a staff of carpenters were at once put to work repairing the break.

More trouble occurred on the Santa Ana penters were at once put to work repairing the break.

More trouble occurred on the Santa Anabranch, and traffic remained closed throughout the day. The Los Angeles River washed the track out at Vindale, where it crosses the river, and also at McPherson and New River. At Tustin there was a ninety-foot break, and altogether the Santa Ana branch was badly tangled up. With this exception, however, other trains were dispatched, albeit somewhat late, and today, if the rain ceases, the system will be again complete and unobstructed.

The Surf line continues to be the weak spot with the Southern California road. During the hight and early morning there were small washouts reported on almost every division of the road, but gangs of men, put at once to work, repaired these defects, and during the greater part of the day trains were running on all lines, excepting the Surf line to San Diego, although somewhat behind time. A washout at Perris, and others at Temecula and San Jacatho, stopped traffic for a time, but these, too, were set to right later in the day.

ing, did not reach the city until late last evening.

The Terminal road was entirely tied up on Friday night, and was not in very good shape yesterday. A bad break occurred at Fruitland, three miles outside the city limits, and this cannot be repaired in an hour or two. A bank of earth caved in just north of Macy-street bridge and blocked traffic completely there. A gang of men finally cleared the line, and at 12:30 o'chock a train was sent through the Fasschane. Freight arriving by steamer and brought by the Terminal, was hauled by the Southern Pacific, by courtesy of General Freight Agent Crawley.

The San Bernardino train that reaches the city in the morning at about 10 o'clock was delayed yesterday over an hour by the rains weakening the bridge east of Glendora.

ARRIVAL OF DELAYED TRAINS. The New Orleans express on the South-rn Pacific, due here at 7:30 o'clock Sat-rday morning, arrived at the Arcade Deurday morning, arrived at the Arcade Depot nearly seven hours lete. It brought the steepers of the Los Angeles express, which was due here at 1:48 Friday afternoon. Both trains were stelled at Mojave because of a fandsilde in Soledad Canyon and washouts at Tejunga. The train was moved with great caution through Soledad Canyon, where sections of the treck are close to the river. Two locomotives drew the San Francisco express northward Saturday morning, with a scent load of passengers aboard. Freight trains were moved northward as repidly as possible.

RUSHING REPAIRS.

General Manager K. H. Wade of the Manager K. H. Wade of the California Railway said to a Times reporter last night that unless rains should continue during Saturheavy rains should continue during Satur-day night he hoped to have regular train service between this city and San Diego re-established on Sunday. The several wash-outs have been repaired with remarkable colerity. Trainloads of rock, pile-drivers and expert bridge-builders have been go-tively at work day and night remarkable. and expert bridge-builders have been actively at work day and night, repairing damage wrought by the severe storms of the week. At San Diego city, during the last five days, nearly six inches of rain fell, nearly two inches falling in one day. fell, nearly two inches falling in one day. Such an unusual record causes trouble along the railway, but with a further daily rainfall of one-half or three-fourths of an inch Manager Wade does not apprehend a continuation of serious trouble along the line. Trains are running out San Bernardino way, and the overland service has been maintained with creditable regularity. General Manager Wade is exercising a tireless watch over the large interests in his care, and covers all points of trouble as quickly as it is possible for men and engines to cover them.

as quickly as it is possible for men and engines to cover them.

In speaking of the quickness with which a railroad bridge can be rebuilt in case of emergency, he recalled one of his experiences years ago on the Burlington road. About midnight he was notified of the burning of a 195-foot bridge, 200 miles from Burlington, where he was stationed. In less than an hour his construction train, bridge men and 100 workmen were speed-Burlington, where he was stationed. In less than an hour his construction train, bridge men and 100 workmen were speeding to the scene of the disaster. He had ordered another train from a point the other side of the bridge, with a large force of men to meet him at the bridge. In less than four hours 250 men were at work rebuilding the ruined bridge. Under Managar Wade's vigorous direction the men worked like beavers, and within eightéen hours from the time of the receipt of the news of the destruction of the bridge by him at Burlington, 200 miles away, a new bridge was constructed, and the great railroad was once more open for traffic. Such prompt work in rebuilding so large a bridge is astonishing to any one not familiar with practical railroad work, and is an illustration of the excellent executive ability of a wide-awake railroad more, and is an illustration of the excellent executive ability of a bridge-awake railroad manager.

TO FORECLOSE THE UNION PACIFIC.

ST. LOUIS January 19.—Before Judge Walter H. Sanford in the United States Circuit Court today, Attorneys Winslow Pierce and R. A. Hall, representing Gordon Dexter and Oliver Ames, second trustees for the first mortgage bondholders of the Union Pacific Railway Company, filed a bill of complaint setting forth that the interest on $27,000,000 of first mortgage bonds had been defaulted January 1, 1895, and asked for the foreclosure of the mortgage and the appointment of separate receivers for that division covered by the mortgage known as the main line. The court took the matter under advisement and will render a decision probably the first of next week.

Prior to bringing in his bill of complaint, Mr. Pierce stated that the matter of asking for an order of foreclosure and the appointment of receivers was purely one of form. He said that it was being done on all of the Union Pacific lines when the interest defaulted and denied that it was done for the purpose of stirring up Congress.

He said the first mortgage bondholders wanted protection and were taking the customary course. He further stated that the present receivers, known as the Ames receivers, would doubtless be reappointed. Mr. Pierce said that so many limbs have been lopped off the Union Pacific system under the present receivership that it has been pretty well stripped. The new receivership if directed, will take the place of the old receiverships on all lines affected by the first mortgage.

Foreclosure suits similar to this have been instituted in the case of the Oregon Short Line, the Utah Southern, Utah Northern, and in fact in many places on the system where the coupons are in default. The same procedure follows everywhere on the system.

Street Department Demands.

EX-SUPERINTENDENT WATSON BE-FORE THE FINANCE COMMITTEE. The matter of the demands for work or the street department, as presented to services performed under D. A. Watsor when he was Street Superintenden which demands were in excess of the amount allowed by ordinance to be expended for such purposes, was taken to the City Council held yesterday.

Chairman Stockwell stated the purpose an investigation of the demands a the street department, as presented for of an investigation of the demands and asked W. H. Riggs, who was one of Mr Watson's deputies, to explain in reference to the matter.

Mr. Riggs stated that he had done no work, or rather had none done by the department, that was not ordered by the Council. Since a new method of keeping the books of the office was introduced about six months ago he (Riggs) had not kept time, but the foreman had done it. There was no Councilman but was asking

There was no Councilman but was asking for crosswalks and other improvements and the fact of the matter was that at the time of the change of administration there was turned over to the incoming Street Superintendent about $300 worth of work which there had not been help enough allowed to do.

Ex-Street Superintendent Watsen stated that the demands in question had in December been found to be in excess of the amount allowed for the department. The Finance Committee of the old Council had stated it to be the intention to turn the matter over to the new Finance Committee to "wrestle" with.

Committeeman Snyder said it appeared to him it would have been well for the former Finance Committee to settle the matter.

former Finance Committee to settle the matter.

Ex-Superintendent Watson was asked for the record of the services of the men presenting the demands, as shown by the entries on the timebooks of the several foremen, to which Mr. Watson replied he thought the books were in the Street Superintendent's office.

It was stated, however, that the only book bearing on the matter that could be found in the office was the one in which had been entered the number of days each man had worked each month, but not the record of which days each man had worked.

It was announced by both Chairman

It was announced by both Chairman Stockwell and Committeeman Snyder to be the intention of the committee to give the matter a careful and thorough investigation. This, however, could not be done without the original timebooks could be produced so that the demands could be produced so that the demands could be checked. It was finally arranged to defer further action in the matter till afternoon, so that the foreman who had the several timebooks could be found and the books could be obtained for examination.

The committee met again in the afternoon as arranged, but the timebooks were not produced. It was stated later in the day to be the intention of the committee to not approve the demands until they could be checked from the original timebooks or else to hold each demand until the man presenting it would come before the committee and make proper statement to the effect that he had performed the services purported in the demand to have been performed.

INVESTIGATION.

The Bridge Committee of the City Council will submit a report to that body tomorrow as follows:

"In the matter of the cost of the painting of the Downey-avenue and First-street bridges, the City Auditor states that the demands so far paid for this work is $972.91. The demands still on hand and awaiting approval amount to $997.91, making a total of $1970.82.

"While the estimates presented do not amount to this within about $300, from the testimony given before the late Council, it appears that a large amount of extra work was necessary in scraping the bridges before they could be painted, and we believe that from all the facts that we can gather that the demands should be paid. We have therefore presented requisitions covering the amount of the demands for material and labor still unapproved."

Sewer Flushtanks. NEW PATTERN EXAMINED BY COUNCILMEN.

A number of the Councilmen examined esterday afternoon the workings of wha yesterday afternoon the workings of what is known as the Walker flushtank, for use in flushing sewers. This pattern is so constructed that the pneumatic pressure of the water in the tank when nearly full causes the whole amount of water to be discharged in a mass. The Council is conconsidering the adoption of this kind of flushtank in place of the pattern at present in use, for the former has no automatic, but merely a pneumatic action. The automatic arrangement, it is claimed, is liable to get out of order so as to prevent the working of the tank, and when out of order is very difficult to repair.

The kind proposed to be adopted has no hinged or pivoted device, and its working is only dependent upon the proper action of air and water.

Flushtanks, it will be understood, are placed at the heads of sewers, and are so constructed that a small stream of water running into a tank is nearly full when the weight of the water will act on a patented device and cause the whole volume of water thus collected to be suddenly discharged into the sewer, which is, of course, much more thoroughly cleansed by this means than by a constant small stream flowing into it.

It is thought the letting of the constant in the sewer is the constant in the sewer is the constant in the letting of the constant in the letting of the constant is the setting of the constant in the letting of the constant is the sewer in the constant in the letting of the constant is the constant in the letting of the constant is the constant in the letting of the constant is the constant in the letting of the constant is the constant in the constant in the constant is the constant in the constant i known as the Walker flushtank, for use by this means than by a constant small stream flowing into it.

It is thought the letting of the contracts for sewer work recommended by the Sewer Committee will be temporarily delayed, pending a decision by the Council as to the adoption of the new pattern of flushing apparatus considered.

Recommend the Lamp be Moved. The Gas and Light Committee has greed to report to the City Council as follows:

"In the matter of the motion of the Councilman from the Eighth Ward, recommending that the electric light mast at the southwest corner of Alameda and Commercial streets be moved to the north-east corner of the same intersection, we recommend that the City Clerk be instructed to notify the electric light company to so move said mast."

The Ninth Ward Councilman Councilman Blanchard, the Ninth Ward representative, to whom was referred cer-tain matters presented to the City Council, reports on them as follows:

"I recommend that the petition from A. Workman, asking that a sewer district be formed to connect Boyle avenue with the main sewer that runs through Hollenbeck Arroyo, be denied.
"I also recommend that the protest from C. D. Plank and others against a sewer estructed on Sec being constructed on second street between the northwest corner of lot 30, of the Workman & Hollenbeck tract, and St. Louis avenue, be granted and the proceed-ings commenced therefor be abandoned."

offered by the spectacle of a young man being tried for his life. The first witness called was Miss Ethel Lowe, the young woman with whom Elihean spent the last few hours of his life. In clear, but low tones, in which there was not the slightest trace of pervousness, Miss Lowe testified that on the evening of November 22 last she assisted Elikan in making up his cash at the store, and saw him place the money in several small sacks into his satchel. Among the cash were several foreign coins, which she readily identified. She then reiterated the statement of the facts relating to the manner in which she and Elikan spent the evening, made by her at the Coroner's inquest, and introduced upon the trial of the Feeler case. During the afternoon session Dr. H. Brooklyn Strikers Resist the Militia.

Several Hand-to-hand Encounters During the Afternoon Yesterday.

The First Appearance of the Troops Greeted with Hisses, and Even the Striker Ladies Brandish Their Fists.

BROOKLYN, Jan. 19.—About three housand militia were under arms today, thousand militia were under arms today, prepared to put down any violence on the part of striking street railway men or sympathizers. The first appearance of the soldiery upon the streets was greeted with jeers and hissing from the men and boys who thronged the thoroughfares, while women at the windows of tenementhouses shook their fists and uttered imprecations. A detachment of troops has been sent to the stations of all trolley lines which the companies propose to operate.

C. Cates, ex-Coroner, testified to the fact of having held an inquest upon Elikan's body.

Louis M. Bailey and L. H. Brown testified to having seen and taken plaster impressions of the footprints found in the sand on the beach, and in the alley near the store. For the benefit of the jury the shoes of both defendants were fitted into the casts, and they were then inspected by each juror individually.

George Hurst, the blacksmith, from whose shop the tools used by the two defendants in effecting an entrance to Elikan's store had been stolen, identified a brace and bit and two chisels.

John Nevins, the boy who found the stolen canned goods hidden under a porch, and D. P. Thayer, who met the defendants at Commercial-street depot on the Saturday preceding the murder, retold their stories.

The notes of Healey's testimony taken at the preliminary examination, were then read by A. M. Cates to the jury, and, after Dr. Wellborn had been examined as to the cause of Elikan's death, as shown by the autopsy, court adjourned for the day.

The case will be resumed on Monday morning at 10 o'clock. lines which the companies propose to operate.

The millita at the Jamaica car stables were forced to charge a big mob three times after 6 o'clock. The first time the strikers gathered around the stables in the streets and jeered the soldiers. Col. Eddy who was in charge, drew his men up in line and gave an order to charge. The mob was driven back to the house on the opposite side of the street and fell pelimell through the doorways and down cellars, and, in fact, wherever they could find a place of escape. One person, Charles Wilson, was injured by being stabled in the back with a bayonet. He was taken to a hospital established by Assistant Surgeon Melcher in one of the empty carhouses, where his wound was dressed.

Assistant Surgeon Melcher in one of the empty carhouses, where his wound was dressed.

At 7:10 and again at 7:15 o'clock' the militia again charged the mob, which had become once again threatening. The strikers and their friends had begun to gather in front of the carhouse and jeered the soldiers. There were several personal encounters between the guards and the mob, which began to close around the carhouse. Col. Eddy called on his reserves, formed them into line, stretched them along the street for a distance of 250 feet and gave the order to advance. Some of the strikers and their sympathizers took issue with the militia and stopped to argue the point.

The temper of the crowd necessitated a third charge. Again the soldiers advanced on the mob and drove it from the street at the point of the bayonet. A second man was wounded. His name is Thomas Nolan, a compositor. He fell and was struck on the left knee with a bayonet. He was removed to his home.

At 10:45 p.m. the strikers had been rioting for the last three-quarters of an hour in the vicinity of the car stables on Jamaica avenue. In the Twenty-sixth Ward they are hurling bricks and stones in every direction. The militiary scattered the crowd time and time again. Several men and women were wounded. Eugene Williams was stabbed in the back by a bayonet. Phillip Tighe was also stabbed by a bayonet. A woman, whose name could not be learned, while attempting to pass through the line, received a similar wound by a guardsman whose bayonet was pointed in the direction of the fleeing crowd. The militia drove the rioters down Alabama and Georgia avenues several times, chasing them for four blocks. The situation at this place is a serious one. Several ambulances have been sent to the 'scene of the riot.

Upon motion of the District Attorney an information was filed in Department One yesterday morning, charging John Chapman with the crime of burging, and a new information was filed, charging Chris Hepchen with having committed an assault with a deadly weapon. Both defendants were ordered to appear for arraignment on Monday.

Oscar Woodruff appeared before Judge Clark yesterday morning and applied for his release from the County Jail through the medium of habeas corpus proceedings. It appearing that, although Woodruff had been held to answer to the charge of grand larceny by Justice Barnes of Pomona, the District Attorney had not filed an information, on account of the insufficiency of the evidence, the petitioner was discharged. During the rioting in the vicinity of the Alabama-avenue horse barns some of the strikers retreated to the roofs of houses and heaved down stones onto the troops. lance calls were sent to the St. Mary's Hospital.

The battle waged fiercely up and down the short block on Alabama avenue, between the railroad and depot and Aalantic avenue. The soldiers drove many strikers into the salcons, which lined each side of the street and kept them prisoners within. They drove the remainder of the rioters, aided by the police reserve and mounted squad, out of sight across Atlantic avenue and down a side street. Meantime additions to the strikers were being made from the surrounding stores. Crowds of sympathizers from this everincreasing mob mounted to the elevated railroad tracks and from this point of vantage hurled missiles of every conceivable kind at the members of the National Guard, nearly half of whom were struck THE HOSTILITIES RESUMED IN tage hurled missiles of every conceivable kind at the members of the National Guard, nearly half of whom were struck and more or less wounded. So serious indeed had the state of affairs become that, as soon as the strikers had been driven from their vantage ground, Maj. Cochran, in command of the guardsmen, sent an emphatic request to headquarters for reinforcements. Two companies were soon upon the scene. By this time, however, hostilities had ended and at midnight all was quiet on the battlefield.

The following was given out at brigade headquarters at 2 am.: "Mayor Schieren stated last night that he would request the Executive Committee of the former employees and also the representatives of surface roads to call at his house on Sunday morning for the purpose of suggesting that the strike matter be left for adjustment to three disinterested citizens to be appointed by him."

Calling out the troops has caused indignation among the labor unions. Master Workman Connelly said that a general strike may be ordered before Sunday. At noon, there was no change in the number of roads in operation. The members of the Board of Mediation and Arbitration will make every effort to bring about a settlement today, although they concede that they have no reason to expect success. The first demonstration of violence towards soldiers took place at Halsey-street depot, where Corp. Cherry of Co. I, Forty-seventh Regiment, was knocked down and so severely beaten that he had to be taken to the armory.

so severely beaten that he had to be taken to the armory.

Several cars were attacked by mobs and motormen, and the conductors were severely beaten. Cos. F and G, Forty-seventh Regiment, were sent to East New York depot on Fulton street at noon. A crowd of strikers had collected there to prevent the cars being started. The police charged the mob and used their clubs freely. Two strikers were badly hurt. Nearly sixteen hundred strikers and sympathizers waylaid two Broadway cars near pathizers waylaid two Broadway cars near Flushing avenue and carried off the motor men and conductors as prisoners.

the day, and the strikers had some serious clashes with the militia. In many instances non-union men were badly hurt, and so flerce were the attacks of the strikers tonight that the soldiers had to record to the bayonet. Several strikers or sympathizers were bayoneted, and the cituation is, considered the gravest that has comfronted the city for many years.

The Board of Medistion and Arbitration has given up its attempt at reconciling the two factions. Commissioners Robertson and Purcell have apparently abandened any hope of effecting a compromise, Rumors were abroad throughout the day that the elevated-road men would go out in sympathy with the surface men. It is stated by the elevated leaders that it was not at all likely that a general strike would be ordered Monday. General RAIN or no rain, hundreds of pairs of blankets will be sold this week at the "City of London," No. 211 South Broadway, at about two-thirds their regular price. Underneath the picture was the inscription: "Modified to suit the ideas of the Fire and Police boards and the W.C.T.U."

At the close of the performance the Chief notified the management that certain features would have to be modified. He did not say just what features this referred to, but it is most likely that "The Temptation of St. Anthony" and "Truth Unveiled" are the pictures to which he objects.

MEXICO'S ULTIMATUM.

What Guatemala Must Concede She Wishes to Maintain Peace.

What Guatemala Must Concede if She Wishes to Maintain Peace. Associated Press Leased wire Series.

CITY Of MEXICO, Jan. 19.—Don Emilio de Leon, Guatemalam Minister to Mexico, was seen at the National Palace today, emerging from a conference with the Mexican Minister of Foreign Relations. He positively denied that diplomatic negotiations had come to an end over the international boundary dispute. He referred the correspondent to an article in El Nacional of today, which says that the Guatemalan envoy is given full power to act in all departments of the case and settle it according to the instructions he bears.

El Universal, counted as the semi-official paper of the Mexican government, contains a confirmation of the statement that Guatemala has rejected Mexico's claims. These claims, considered as Mexico's ultimatum, are about as follows:

"Frat—Full satisfaction from Guatemala for the invasion of Mexican territory and the destruction by armed Guatemala officers of logging camps belonging to Mexican citizens and Americans.

"Second—Due indemnity for damage done on said invasion."

"Third—Remuneration in full to Mexico for expense incurred by this country in sending armed forces to the Guatemalan frontier and their maintenance at present there.

"Fourth—Speedy conclusion of the boundary, survey between Mexico and Guatemala as provided for in the treaty of 1882."

The war feeling here runs very high.

A heavy shower at 11 o'clock today filled the streets with running water, and thousands of dollars will be required to repair damages to city thoroughtares occasioned by the storm. The weather is still unsettled, and more rain is predicted for tonight. The rainfall for the last twenty-four hours in San Diego has been 2.19 inches, making the total 9.35 inches for the season, while in the mountains the present storm has brought from 10 to 15 inches. Snow is now reported at Cuyamaca dam, forty miles from here.

ANTI-TOXINE.

THE NEW DIPHTHERIA REMEDY A BUCCESS

The First Case Treated in This City by the New Remedy Has Far Exceeded Expectations of its Advocates.

Health Officer Powers several days ago, through the courtesy of the Health Officer of San Bernardino obtained a small quan-tity of anti-toxine, the new diphtheria remedy. As has been heretofore published the remedy was tried by Dr. Powers and

Kannon in regard to the boy, Thomas Hanlon, No. 147 South Hayes street, who

A reporter of The Times called on Dr. Kannon in regard to the boy, Thomas Hanlon, No. 147 South Hayes street, who is undergoing the anti-toxine treatment for diphtheria, and he received more information regarding the disease and the new treatment than he expected.

In answer to the question as to how the child was, the doctor said: "The patient Thomas Hanlon, is decidedly better, in fact he is well. It was a case of the most malignant variety of the disease, and it proves without a doubt in my mind that the new treatment is a wonderful advancement in the progress of the profession. One week ago today, Saturday, January 12, the boy complained of feeling sick and had all the usual symptoms of the disease. I saw him Monday, January 14. He was then suffering from high fever, rapid pulse and all the signs of a malignant case of diphtheria. Knewing how unsatisfactory the treatment of the disease in this form has hitherto been, and khowing also that Dr. Powers with his usual alacrity had received from New York a small supply of anti-toxine, I determined to test its value. The doctor and myself gave the first injection Wednesday night at 9 o'clock, and, as it takes twenty-four hours to have much effect, we both waited anxiously for the result. At the end of that time we were more than surprised; we were astonished, for it far surpassed anything we hought could be done for such a terrible disease. Every symptom had undergone a wonderful change for the better, and, excepting a small piece of false membrane which totally disappeared eight hours after the second injection, the child was perfectly well, when you remember that almost all malignant cases die and even in cases of medium severity it takes from two or three weeks for convalescence to take place. The death rate in European hospitals has been for this disease as high as 56 per cent., but since the discovery of anti-toxine it has been reduced to as low as 15 per cent. in some portions of Europe; particularly Russia and our Northern States and Canada it has swept aw

A Revival of the "Tear Bottle" of the Ladies of Pompeii Looked For-ward to-The Handkerchief of Fashion.

NEW YORK CITY, Jan. 16 .- (From Our Regular Correspondent.) These are the days when the grip, or the colds that resemble it, are abroad, and womankind is wishing that, as she has to cry, she might bottle her tears as they dropped, slowly and gracefully, into bottles of cut glass, having gold stoppers, set about with prec-ious stopes. That is what the ladies of Pompeil used to do, and no well-bred roman of that day, or that city, thought of such a thing as weeping into a hand-kerchief. There can be no doubt that the women who wished to be thought graceful could practice a lovely pose, with her tear bottle, before her mirror, and then, when she sealed it up, she could send this bottled grief to her best young man in a registered letter, with a little note, saying. "You have all my heart, and these are the tears I have wept for you since you left." The tear bottle would be an absolute proof, and the maiden, fair but thoughtful, could write on the outside of the envelope, in very lyrge letters: "Glass: please don't stamp too hard." These were undoubtedly the days of romance. It was said that some very fetching young woman who lived then, and who appreciated the impression made by a bottle of tears, and still did not like to have a red nose, used to get their slaves to do their weeping for them, and gave them physical culture by administering, to the said slaves, good, sound whippings, so that they might have something to cry about.

HOW WE WEEP.

Nowadays we weep in handkerchiefs. It is just possible that they may have magic is just possible that they may have magic in the web of them, but the way they disappear when they visit a French laundry is something past description. And the way a French laundress can assure yen that you only had five handkerchiefs in the wash, when you remember counting ten, is most beautiful. (She is cool and collected when among the linen squares returned to you is one trimmed with coarse lace and having somebody elses initials upon it. This, she will pleasantly inform you, is yours, and at last you are forced to keep it because you cannot get any other.

The handkerchief nowadays—that is, the proper handkerchief—is Parge in size, Ine of texture, has a tiny frill of real lace about it, and your initials, very small ones, embroidered quite simply far down in one corner. I never could understand people having black handkerchiefs. They are not pretty, they were not useful, and they would look like dust cloths. However, they are out of fashion long ago and nobody grieves for them.

ANY WOMAN OF SENSE

ANY WOMAN OF SENSE Knows that her handkerchief should never make the acquaintance of starch, that abominable stuff that has ruined so many abominable stuff that has ruined so many pretty ones, and it should be only folded twice. The laundress thinks differently; and so she makes it as stiff as possible, folds it in the size of a postage stamp, and is surprised that you don't like hemethod. I feel positively certain that we will go back to the tear bottle. There are so many good specimens of glass and china to be used for this purpose, that it seems almost a shame not to have the beautiful materials developed in the graceful vasematerials developed in the graceful vase shaped affairs. shaped affairs.

How many people that you know look pretty when they are asleep? Of course, a baby always looks like an angel, but people don't keep babies all their lives. Those women who have studied the subject say the grace and beauty of the figure is increased by the position taken when tired nature's sweet restorer rules one. It is said that

THE BEST POSITION

In which to sleep is slightly on one side, with the body stretched at its full length. The Russian soldiers, credited with being the straightest men in the world, claim that their fine figures come from sleeping in the shape of the letter S, but insist that this way of sleeping must be begun early in life and persisted in. After all, what one sleeps on "really concerns the sleeper very much more than anything else. You would not like to think of the Sleeping Beauty resting upon husks and covered with coarse linen, while you can perfectly understand the dainty court lady, whose skin was so supersensitive that she felt the rose leaf under forty silken spreads.

The idea of luxury in the bedroom is the result of generations of ease and wealth. The nouveau riche never appreciates it. She is apt to put her bedroom in the hands of a professional fur-fisher, and the result is a cross between the royal spartments at some of the continental hotels and a funereal couch. His Mea is to have a huge four-poster in the center of the room reached by four steps In which to sleep is slightly on one side center of the room, reached by four steps.

A ROOM OF ERRORS.

The chairs are in harmony with this awful bed, and not one of them for an dinstant suggests such a delighful thing as loading. The foul fiend, in the shape of the decorator, then puts geomy curtains about the bed, three foothers on the top of cach post, and finishers on the top of cach post, and finishers on the top of cach post, and finishers on the poisons of the Borgias, rather than all the silver belengings, bottles of sweet scents and bowls of perfume that belong to the high of the mineteenth century. A woman's bedroom ought, first of all, to look restful. It should have lounges and chairs that seem to hold open wide their arms, and invite you in their dumb way to spoze. One's bed does not want to be in the middle of the room, and it does not want to look so funereal that one feels as if one would like to ask one's husband to turn Mormon, and allow two or three of the wives to sleep with one, so that one would not dream of spooks and wake up with a cold chill.

The prettient bedroom that I know has a CHIPPENDALE BED IN IT

Which stands against the wall, while from the canopy top fall curtains of bolting cloth embroidered in the most exquisite manner; those on the top having popples upon them, suggesting that sleep nay come to the eyes, while those at the foot are bright with morning slories, inviting the beautiful sleeper to wake and see the sum. Inside, the canopy is lined with rose-colored slik, and so is the part at the back against which is hung a levely protected with the periodical come to foot. This bed is always dressed, as it should be, it white. The finest of linen form has a level of the with morning slories, inviting the beautiful sleeper to wake and see the foot are bright with morning slories, inviting the beautiful sleeper to wake and see the foot are bright with morning slories, inviting the beautiful sleeper to wake and see the foot are bright with morning slories, inviting the beautiful sleeper to wake and see the foot are bri

YES, THERE ARE OTHERS.

the foot of the bed is a little lounge matches, it being upholstered in a brocade with pink roses upon it, that matches, it being upholstered in white brocade with pink roses upon it, while pillows of pink and gold and white and pale green are piled up and seem to ask one to rost against them for a ten minutes nap. There are no end of comfortable chairs, and the dressing-table, besides all its silver belongings. Shows that this room is lived in, for there is a hastily written note, a couple of photographs, and a little prayer-book with a ribbon marker showing where it was last used. Then, before my lady goes to bed, the small "in case" table is pushed within reach of her hand, and on the sliver tray upon it is a taper with a box of matches beside it, a Dresden plate with some fruit and biscuits on it, a jug of water, one of claret and two tumblers. If my lady should waken and be frightened at the dark, she can quickly ight the candle at her side, while if she is hungry or thirsty, there is almost under her hand whatever she may wish.

Another beautiful bed of white and gold is slept in by a young girl. The frame is of white enamel, picked out with gold here and there, while at the top are two golden angels, who look as if they were blessing the sleeper, while from their hands fall the full, soft, muslin curtains that drape the bed. Nowadays one's linen must be made by hand. Not long ago I saw some sheets that came direct from Felix. They were fine enough to certainly go through a bangle. The upper hem was very deep and all the edges were hemstitched. Upon it was wrought in enormous letters a monogram, having above it a viscount's crown, while the upper edge was finished with a frill of REAL VALENCIENES LACE,

REAL VALENCIENES LACE, Half a yard wide. The reality of the lace and the fact that there is not a great deal of it seen nowadays made these sheets and the fact that there is not a great deal of it seen nowadays made these sheets cost $250 a pair. Some women with more money than brains bought in Paris some superb beds that had set in the top of the canopy huge mirrors. However, after they had been laughed at by people who knew better, and they had discovered, where these beds were originally used, the Venetian glass was quickly removed and silk drapings put in its place.

I saw in a Western paper, and of course Western papers always tell the truth, that the professional spanker was again in favor, and her customers increasing. I cannot but believe that in time the work of the professional spanker will not be confined to children. Fancy the advantage a husband would have over an unruly wife. On his way home to dinner he would leave his order, and he then could say the next morning, quite pleasantly, "My dear, the dinners have been very bad lately, you have shown evidence of idleness and lack of thought, consequently the spanker will arrive this morning at 11 o'clock

AND WHIP YOU INTO

AND WHIP YOU INTO A better frame of mind." You see the professional spanker would not overdo the professional spanker would not overdo the business. She would grade her blows according to the size and strength of the patient, being careful, while administering the punishment, to place the patient so that the blood would be drawn from the head, and walking would be preferred to sitting down for an hour or two after the seance. There is nothing more cruel than striking a child about the head, and any woman ought to be punished who does it. The faults for which this sort of punishment should be administered, to old and young alike, this punishment that hurts and is mortifying, should be for mean faults. Those of greediness, impertinence, irreverence, untruthfulness and selfishness. The New York street-cleaning department ought just now to be put under spankers who have great strength of arm. Beautiful boots in which to walk are an absolute impossiblity here. Clean ones are equally impossible, and the street cars have a method of their own of stopping just in front of puddles of slush, puddles not deep enough to drown lovely woman, but to splash her all over. I am not surprised that foreigners laugh at our streets. Any country road is in a better condition than is Fifth avenue today, and this state of affairs exists in the largest city of the greatest republic in the world.

DINNER ADVICE. Bye-the-bye, a woman asked me to tell her something about successful dinners. Here is what I have got to say:

Here is what I have got to say:

A hostess who wants to make her dinners popular, may have them as simple as she likes, but there are some laws she must observe as strictly and with as much force as those of the Medes and Persians. She must not bake what ought to be roasted, nor serve a fillet in such a condition that nobody knows whether it is a gutta percha shoe of a piece of Lincrusta Walton.

Waiton.

She must not have the napery starched so stiffly that the man with the youthful mustache feels that every time he passes his napkin to his mouth he is risking the destruction of the pride of his life.

She must not count the sweets as of the greatest importance, nor should she believe that a bad dinner can be saved by a much decorated cake, or an elaborate feed pudding.

terested in anything except serving, he should not smile at a funny story, nor should he seem interested when the future of Ireland is being discussed.

She should see that her coffee is clear as her conscience and as strong as her love.

She should not attempt to elaborate a menu, as she wishes each dish to reach menu, as she wishes each dish to reach the height of perfection.

And when the successful dinner is achieved, she should give the cook a large dose of encouragement—a medicine always pleasant to take. The woman who understands the art of dinner giving is the woman who is past mistress in the art of keeping her husband at home. BAB.

henceforward appear monthly instead of quarterly."

France has the talent for making political journals subsist, and some which are the most blatant in their demaggism have the widest circulation. But the fact that such an interesting and popularly readable magazine as L'Astronomie, edited by such a writer as Flammarion should be allowed to go down, speaks badly for the vaunted civilization of France.

We have a few astronomical publications in our own land, and would that they had more of the popular element in them. We do need journals and magazines which are purely scientific for those high up in the realms of science; but for those of us who are business men, farmers, lawyers, mechanics, ciergymen, etc., etc., scientific knowledge and discoveries should be popularized. Hence, I express the wish of a great many that the journal entitled Astronomy and Astrophysics, which has been acquired by the Chicago University and has been changed to the name of Astrophysical Journal, may be a new departure—that it may contain at least some pages for laymen in science, like myself, and the majority of readers.

of all mistresses who did not wish to see callers instructed the maid or footman to say "not at home," and the lie was called a white one if any kind of an one, and excused on the ground that "not at home" was merely a formula for saying not at home to callers.

This winter the attendant is bidden to say, "yez, Mrs. Blank is at home but begs to be excused." Nobody but a peddler thinks of arguing the matter after this. A card is left, and the caller retires with no thought of a slight, understanding that the message is given in good faith, for one of great possible excellent reasons, and not to him or her exclusively, but to all who may call.

Many hostesses who "have a day" when they are at home to all callers, are obliged to deny themselves, at nearly all other times, in order to reserve time needed for their thousand and three other duties or pleasures, whether social, domestic or what not.

People who do not call upon regular visiting day, cannot be disappointed at not finding a friend free to receive them. And whether one has or has not a visiting day it is so polite and honest and excusable withal to plead an engagement of some sort that requires one to be excused from seeing chance callers, the latter cannot possibly take offense if they are sensible. And those who are not sensible will be mollified by the fact that the usage, in good society, has come in with a vim that promises permanency.

The most impassive servant always betrayed the lie in repeating a not-at-home order when it was untrue, a certain self-consciousness which, try as the maid or footman would, to appear civil. I was rich... A $10,000-check was in my hand. I was on my way to the bank it Santa, Barbara. I would deposit it and draw on it at my convenience. My every whim should be satisfied; the draw of my life should be carried out.

It was during the boom days in Southern California. I was the undisputed owner of 160 acres of land described as lying in the northeast corner of 8.5.

owner of 180 acres of land described as lying in the northeast corner of S. 5. R. 2. T. 4. S. An Eastern tenderfoot had come to the conclusion that he wanted it; a real estate agent convinced him he wanted it bad.

It was worth twice the money, but he thought I would part with it for ten thousand, minus the agent's 5 per cent. commission.

thought I would part with it for ten thousand, minus the agent's 5 per cent. commission.

The tenderfoot would never get another chance like that. Land was selling very fast. It would soon be all gone. He bought. I had the check. I was wild with delight. I was a great inventor. I would set the world wild. It was all worked out and perfected in my mind, and I had the money to carry into effect my cherished ideas of twenty years' standing. It was just as simple to nie ten years ago. I knew it would work then—bound to—it couldn't help. It.

I never would risk the chance of making a small model. It would be stolen from me in its transit through the many hands necessary for obtaining a patent. No, I must wait until I could afford to make a complete one, of tull size.

The cashier at the bank smiled as he handed me a little book. I looked at the first leaf inside and saw in a carefully written hand. "The Santa Barbara Nation! Bank in account with John Johnson. Credited by cash $10,000." I involutatily ducked my head as I walked out through the great arched doorway and then felt sheepish that my shadow was apparently no tailer than it was when I entered.

I would take the train for Lee Angeles,

I would take the train for Less Angeles, and, if competent mechanics could be found, they could have the homor of making the different parts to the first self-steering, electric-propelled flying machine ever perfected. The train left at 2:30; it was now 2 o'clock. I hurried down the street as fast as my feet would carry me. No 'bus for me. I was still the practical John Johnson, the Santa Barbara bean-raiser. As I hurriedly turned the corner, Mary Jones ran square into my arms. She blished; I turned green. Great ashes of 'Mabomet! Here was the girl I had been engaged to for the has six months. And yet I hadn't given her one blessed thought since I had received that check. She, too, owned a farm. It was closer to town than mine, and more valuable. They had offered to buy it from her, but she had laughed at them, and east: 'We may need it some day, and I don't need the money now.' I always wondered why she said "we," for she was an orphen, and had no relatives that I knew of, 30 I guess the "we' included myself. Come to think of it, of course it did. "Why, John," she said. "is your mother dying? or are you going?" 'Nestbeit,' I restorted, briefly, for I was in no busmor to have any dreams broken into like that. "Where are you going?" she asked in a matter-of-fact-way. "I amgoing to Los Angeles, dear." I replied, "and may not hab back soon, as I nave some vary important business to attend to the stroke of my lifetime. snapped Mke silken threads! I caught a ail the weight on the other two, they snapped like silken cords! I caught a glance of the register; could I believe my eyes? The needle indicated 5000 revolutions per minute! The noise was deafening. Surely she would rise and fly away. But not so! The reverse motion given to the body of the machine was fast boring a hole in the ground. The thing would soon bury itself! My hair stood on end. I thought of the broken bank. Just then a fan left its socket. With a whir it shot over the fence and through a neighbor's roof, 200 feet away.

I could hear the people on the street, men yelling, women screaming. Had it not been such a dangerous place I could have fainted. Another fan hurled from its socket and flew into the street. Then one went through my back window; the frame was half buried in the sand and dirt. With a sickening dread I turned to leave it to its own misery and destruction, when a detached fan struck me on the side of the head, and I knew no more.

the head, and I knew no more.

"Yes," said the nurse at the County Hospital, "I think you will have to leave in a few days. You are well, and the county don't take care of well folks. Besides, you have been here four months." I turned to leave the reom, when I was handed a letter. I hastily tore it open. It began: "Dear John, I am stopping at the Del Coronado, and, hearing of your sickness, I will take the liberty of calling on you for a few moments this afternoon. Yours,

"How came you here?" I said to her that evening, as we strolled along on the Coronado Beach.

"Well, you see, I just sold four carloads of beans to a wholesale house here and came down to see if I couldn't sell a half dozen more. They are only worth 5 cents now," she answered.

Two days later, after we had just been married, she said with a mischlevous twinkle in her eye:

"Now, shall we fly away to our Santa Turbara home, or shall we take the fatta Rosa? She sails tomorrow." I didn't le the term "fly" or "sail," but I ame Mred, as I tried to look stern, "Let's and;" a she have been married three years now, storn way wants a ciriost just address, IR, and MRS. Cannot something be done on behalf of the long-suffering residents of Grand evenue, south of Washington street? They know full well how to sympathize with those antedeluvians who were out of the ark when the flood came, for with every heavy storm South Grand avenue is a raging torrent with the people minus an ark for its navigation. All the storm-water from Washington street enplies into the avenue at that point and the passage from the sidewalks to the car-tracks is as wet an one as water can make it. A lady would as soon think of wading the Los Angeles River as to attempt to cross this street below its intersection with Washington in a heavy rain. Let our city fathers, whose business it is, attend to this matter, or supply us with boats for use during our winter downpours.

But, as I was saying. I have been companioned by books and papers these long rainy days and I have been glad to note what looks like an attempt at a literary reformation among the French literary relite which gives us the hope of better things in French fiction. We all know that the French Academy, which was founded by Cardinal Richelieu, is composed of the very choicest spirits to be found in the realm of genius and learning in France. It numbers forty members,

France has been surprised recently by the action of these academicians in crowning the work of an obscure author simply on the ground of its purity of sentiment and the wholesome character of the work. I was delving among the critics to learn their opinion of this action of the academy in setting this highest seal of their approval upon "Une Brave Femme." which is said to be "a novel wholly devoid of that diablerie which enters into most French fiction," and I find the following comments thereupon which cannot fail to interest the readers of The Times:

Times:
"The critics call this stirring, breezy story with its briny, bracing atmosphere, a treatise on the herring fishery, and laugh at the academy for having crowned it. But these learned graybeards knew what they, were about. They wanted to show their admiration of wholesome fiction and of a new type of heroine, self-poised, honest, athletic, energetic. It is to be hoped that this sort of heroine will soon displace the morbid, hysterical, loony creature who plays so prominent a part in what might be called the modern pathological novel.

what might be called the modern pathological novel.

"A tired and sated public will turn gladly from the long array of heredity cursed, scrofulous, epileptic, demon possessed heroes and heroines of recent fiction to this rosy-cheeked, purs-blooded fisher girl, Elise, who, though not painted with the master hand of our most famous realistic novelists, is bright, healthy and invigorating as the salt airs of the seawhich became the scene of the heroic life and deeds."

Let the good work go on.

AS TO DRESSES.

Mrs. H. Earhart, One of the Leading Authorities is Interviewed

Mrs. Earhart is one of the leading dress designers in the city. She has possibly done more in the way of dress reform than any other lady in Los An-

Mrs. Earhart is well posted in the styles of fashions of ladies dresses, and to tell all the practical ideas she expressed on women's dresses would fill the mind of the average lady with vis-ions of new and artistic designs.

Yes, it is a pleasant occupation, the art of dressmaking, but it is very hard on the health of a delicate woman. For a number of years she, has been the victim of catarrh and nervousness. After suffering three years I was attracted by the honesty of Dr. Shores' advertising, and at once decided to go to him, and I am glad, for I can say in sincerity, that I can heartily recommend Dr. Shores to all sufferers.

Mrs. Earhart resides at No. 607 San Benito street, Brooklyn Heights. Go see Mrs. Earhart; she will tell you of her recovery.

Until the first of February Dr. Shores will treat all patients for all diseases until cured for five dollars a month, medicine furnished free. Five dollars is all need for a full month's treatment. Don't delay; positively the last month of this low rate for expert specialty treatment.

"No; but I do think that there should be something more stable about the marriage relation than a mere agreement that may be dissolved by reason of the whim of either party at any time."
"But that is putting it too strong for the facts," she exclaimed. "Where 'there seemed to be love, and better acquainance developed hatred, it is better that they separate. This is not any mere assertion: the courts as easy in all cases ance developed hatred, it is better that they separate. This is not any mere assertion; the courts ao say in all cases—even where the priest hath said in solema accent, 'Whom God hath joined let no one sever.' It is not a whim; It is a serious matter when they learn that they do not love, but have learned to hate. It is but a contract at last. Pronouncing solemn words is but a form. God, in fact, no more joins persons in wedlock than he does when they agree to swap horses. They agree in each case. We have cur motives, loves and dislikes. To live is to select. When we marry we continue to live, and our likes, dislikes and preferences remain. If deceived by misrepresentation, or mistaken in our estimation during courtship, does not the marriage you advocate contemplate the loss of the faculty of perception and preclude the ability to correct mistakes? It certainly does, and in that case after marriage we would be mere animals. Indeed, sir, I think that there are no such marriages in this world, and I should feel dreadfully if I thought that there were any marriages in the world to come.

"Corsets!" It has pleased some one to inform you that I oppose corsets. If suicide is a crime, the corset is the most common implement used. No one can breathe freely in corsets. A certain shape is fancied. The corset is to improve the shape. It is the fashion. Certain tribes improve the shape of the head, too. Square heads are confined in boxes so that they conform to the fashion. But the head box is not as fatal as the corset."

that they conform to the fashion. But the head box is not as fatal as the corset."

In this colony we came across another leader, who for freedom of thought traveled perhaps a mile to Mr. Ingersoll's yard. "Inspired writings? Nothing has ever been inspired. I do not scoff. My deductions are from the evidence. If there was such a thing as truth reviled by an all-comprehensive and perfect intellect, there would not be a loop or hinge to hang a doubt upon. It would hold together from beginning to end in gheral and in particular, but there have been no such revelations. It would please me as much as it would any one else, I think, to believe that we inherited everlasting life and that our good deeds were rewarded and our evil deeds punished, but the evidence shows nothing of the kind. The most important command of any is to believe and be saved. Belief is an involuntary conviction of the mind. The idea of a man being commanded to do an involuntary act? Subose you were commanded to believe that I was a white horse, it sometimes else contrary to the evidence before you, could you do it? No, even though you were to be everlastingly punished in case you did not. And to pretend that you so believed would not help you in the least. Creation! That is the stumbling block. People imagine that everything was created, having had a beginning and an end. Nothing was ever created. The better opinion is that material substance has always existed and will ever continue to exist. It is subject to continual change, however, in form and density and temper according to laws."

"Whose laws?"

is the general belief that an all-wise mind superintends, and a perfectly-directed will controls all motions and changes that material substance undergoes; but clearly, the fact is otherwise; that matter merely follows natural laws, just as a rock does when unsupported it rolls down hill, and all changes take place because it is inevitable under the circumstances, and that, were there a directing mind supplied for this purpose, it would become deranged, for the reason that there would positively be nothing for it to think about."
"Your body is material substance," I suggested.
"Yes, sir."
"And your mind directs your will, and your will controls your body, and your body is composed of material substance. Here, theh, is an instance of mind controlling matter, and it is on you to show that the mind is not true in respect to the universe."
"You overlook a distinction to your confusion—animate and inanimate. Mind, including the will, is only an attribute of the animal, principally for its protection, defenseless animals being the most intellectual, but you see no difference between animate and inanimate matter, it seems, and see in gravity the finger of the is the general belief that an all-wise mind

THE RECORD OF THE BAIN UP

The City Still Away Above High Water Mark—What the Churches Will do—Personal and General.

PASADENA, Jan. 19. — (Special Corre-pondence.) The rainfall as recorded at ifen Rosa amounted to 5.84 inches for this ast storm, up to 3 p.m. today, making 7.37 sches for the month, and a total of 15.50 inches for the month, and a total of 10.00 inches for the season, since September 29. Mr. Nelmes says that last season was the most severe test for fruit trees during the thirteen years recorded. The rain came in small quantities, much of it in warm months, and thus dried up. At no time the season of the seas during the season did it penetrate more than fitteen inches. Practically, it may be taid that not more than seven or eight nobes fell in twenty months from March, 1893, to December, 1894. The thirty inches during the season previous to March helped to sustain some, and orange trees that flave not been, irrigated for fourteen years are looking fresh, but their fruit is smaller Local and Personal Happenings at the Close of a Rainy Week.

SANTA MONICA, Jan. 19.—(Special Correspondence.) At the big wharf during the worst of the storm this week the elevated position of the hotsting engines on the coal bunkers rendered it impractical on account of the sweep of the wind to proceed with the discharge of coal from the Wellington. The boat therefore lay off the wharf at anchor until Saturday morning, when the wind having fallen to a breeze thy discharge of the cargo was resumed. The continuous rains have interfered with the discharge of lumber from the schooner Reporter, and she still lies at anchor in the stream.

A TOUGH CHARACTER IN THE SANTA ANA JAIL

The Republican County Executive Committee Declares for Per-kins for United States Senator.

SANTA ANA, Jan. 19. — (Special Correspondence.) It now appears that John or "Jack" Harrington, alias John Matthews, alias John Marshall, is not the good, industrious boy that he, would have some of the residents of this city believe him to be. Readers of the Times will remember that about a wik ago he was arrested here on suspicion of being the party who robbed J. A. Jones' residence of about $40 in money and some small articles of jewelry and family keepsakes. There was little or no evidence against the fellow on this case, but he was a suspicious character, and Sheriff Nichols had him run in. Now it seems that he is a fortunate catch; that he is not only the one who, from present indications, burglarized Mr. Jones' home, but he is an old offender and is wanted by the officers in several counties in this State. Word was received here today from Los Angeles that an officer would be down to take a look at him; that he was believed to be a character that is wanted very badly in that city. If he is the person wanted these he is, while young in years, old and experienced in crime, and has twice served time in San Queutin.

As both railroads are in very bad condition owing to washouts, the Los Angeles officer will now not likely get down to take a look at him; that he was believed the first of the served time in San Queutin.

plays with mysterious instruments, induges in abstruse calculations and keeps tab on the vagaries of the weather.

The reports received last night showed a rising barometer at San Francisco and at points north from there. The temperature fell during the twenty-four hours ending at 5 p.m., excepting at Freano, where a slight rise was noted. The winds continued south to southeasterly, with cloudy weather at all points of observation. The rainfall for the twelve bours was .60 at San Diego; .14 at San Luis Obispo; .01 at Fresno, with just a sprink-ling at San Francisco and Sacramento. From other points rain was not reported. In Los Angeles for the twelve hours, ending at 5 o'clock last night, the precipitation was .33, and for the twenty-four hours, .66, making 4.20 inches for the present storm, which commenced on the 14th inst.

Since the Weather Office was established in this city there have been seven seasons when 2.97 inches, the average record of January's rainfall, has been exceeded. In 1878 the precipitation was .33 inches; 1893, .7.3 inches; 1896, .7.3 inches; 1896, .7.3 inches; 1896, .7.3 inches; 1893, dependent of the present storm has broken the average record for the initial month of the year. The average rainfall for the season is 18.22 and so far the rainfall has measured 10.70, and whether this record is to be broken remains to be seen. The outlook in this unpleasant direction is encouraging.

Apart from the fact that many of the streets are flooded and others, particuarly in the suburban districts, are transformed into immense avenues of uninviting liquid mud, no damage of great moment has been reported. The miniature waterfall on the First-street cut continues to present a picturesque, if somewhat incodivenient, feature of the landscape. A portion of the sanja flume above the Buena Vista street bridge has been washed away, and serious damage might have occurred at the east approach the kuhrts-street bridge had not the street department hurried a force of men to the spot. Water Overseer Caldwell had a force of men Friday and yesterday working on the flume in the river near Buena Vistastreet bridge for the purpose of removing enough of it, if possible, to prevent the remainder from being swept away by the water.

The passengers therefore were obliged to spend the night on the train out on the San Josquin ranch, through the drenching rain. Eearly this morning the train that lays over night in this city was sent on an inspecting tour of the road between Santa Ana and Orange and then it was sent south toward El Toro with a flat car of ties and a small force of workmen to open the way to No. 1 that had left the track the previous evening. At the time this report closed the worktrain had not returned or been heard from.

At 2 o'clock this afternoon a train arrived from Los Angeles, having passed safely over the break in the treatle just south of Fullerton, which laid out the north-bound train Friday evening and compelled the passengers to return to Anaheim for the night.

a number of ranches lying contiguous to the river.

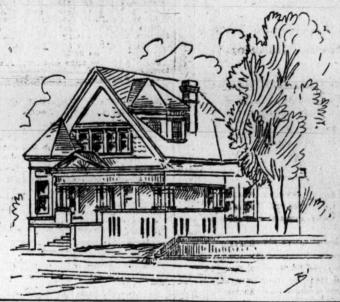

Deputy Sheriff Morgan arrived late this afteranoon from Anahelm, having driven over in a private conveyance, and reports that a good portion of the Santa Ana River is running across the country just south of the "Mother Colony," near the junction of the Tustin branch line of the Southern Pacific road and the Santa Ana branch. He says the stream is about eighty yards wide, and that it bas a good deal of velocity. He thinks it left the river up about Olive.

AT SAN BERNARDINO. SAN BERNARDINO, Jan. 19. — The storm, which commenced last Monday began clearing Thursday, but a heavy wind storm, which commenced last Monday began clearing Thursday, but a heavy wind from the southeast arose and brought back the storm more fiercely than before. A heavy cloudburst in the mountains raised Lytle Creek six feet in an hour, and cut a new channel several hundred feet wider, carrying out the supports under the Santa Fe bridge on the Los Angeles division, and also the motor bridge on the Colton line. At the former a construction crew commenced work at 7 o'clock last evening, and in seven hours the delayed trains from Los Angeles passed over safely. Two trains in from the West today united and went out as overland this afternoon. The overland from the East is in this afternoon nearly on time. The freight sent around the loop division this morning got through, and the passenger set out this noon to follow. No trains on the Santa Fe are running to Riverside on time, transferring from the break to this city by carriages. The storm ditch at Redlands did great damage, cutting out a new channel, carrying off two houses and a barn and destroying much property. The motor road to Redlands is running all right, with but little delay. It is still raining with no signs of cessation. Rainfall for the storm is over five inches, and for the season, over fifteen inches.

is over five inches, and for the season, over fifteen inches.

Capt. A. B. Smith, R. Stedham and C. Taylor attempted to cross Lytle Creek on the extension of E street during the flood which took out the central bents of the Santa Fe and motor bridges. Two horses were drowned and the men saved with difficulty.

AT PEDIANDS

REDLANDS, Jan. 19.—Mill Creek zanja, always an ugly stream at the time of a storm, last night and today did more damage than usual. The engine-house of the steam laundry and a small cottage were undermined and wrecked. The big boarded ditch of Drew & Wills was badly injured and is now seventy-five feet wide and twenty deep. The mountains are covered with snow reaching far down the foot-hills.

RIVERSIDE, Jan. 19.—The heavy storm Friday night and today has shut this city out from the outside world very effectively as today no trains are running. The rainfall was unprecedented, it being fully two fall was unprecedented, it being fully two inches in the past thirty-six hours with the rain coming down in sheets this evening. The floods have caused several washouts on the Santa Fe road, both south and north of here. The canals of the water company and also the large canals of the Riverside Trust Company have broken in many places. The large county bridge over the Santa Ana River, built at an expense of several thousand dollars a couple of years ago, was badly damaged and is in danger of being carried out. The roads in all directions are badly damaged.

AT POMONA.

AT POMONA.

POMONA, Jan. 19.—(Special Correspondence.) Although it has been raining more or less since early morning (before daylight,) and especially so since 2 o'clock this afternoon, with an occasional premonition of probable wind, there has been as yet no damage done whatever in anyway. There is, however, an anxious look upon more than one grower's face as to just how the wind may come in the break-up, should that occur by or before the early hours of the night; in fact, they would prefer a continuance of cloudy, rainy weather until the air should become less coid than it has been during the greater portion of this (Friday's) rain, but "sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof."

were made by nearly all of the lumber firms in the city; brick, lime, sand and plaster were given by various dealers; the plumbing material and much of the work was given free by the various plumbing firms of the city, and a great deal of labor was contributed by the carpenters, painters and others. The plans and all of the architectural work were given by Architect Harry A. Thomas, who also superintended the construction of the building: Andy McNaily furnished workmen and superintended the building of the foundation; the sand used for foundation and plastering was furnished and hauled by James S. Haigler; Frank Wilson of Pico Heights superintended the carpenter work, and A. C. Golsch has kindly insured the building for three years free. The result is a splendid cottage of eight large rooms, hard finished throughout, with bath, hot and cold water, and all modern conveniences, and gives Mrs. Benson a home for herself and children, and a number of rooms to let, and from which she can receive some income.

"Her standing would not be affected in the slightest. She is our child, burn in wedlock. Do you pretend to say that a scandalous lawsuit would help her standing? Do you think that the Lord sanctifies the courts, with their witnesses, three swearing one way and four swearing the other?"

"No; but I do think that there should be semething more stable about the marriage relation than a mere agreement that may be dissolved by reason of the whim of either party at any time."

"But that is putting it too strong for the facts," she exclaimed. "Where there seemed to be love, and better acquainance developed hatred, it is better that they separate. This is not any mere assertion; the courts ao say in all caseseven where the Driest hath said in solema accent. "Whom God hath joined let no one sever." It is not any mere assertion matter when they learned to hate. It is but a contract at last. Pronouncing solemn words is but a form. In this colony we came across another leader, who for freedom of thought traveled perhaps a mile to Mr. Ingersoll's yard. "Inspired writings? Nothing has ever been inspired. I do not scoff. My deductions are from the evidence. If there was such a thing as truth reviled by an all-comprehensive and perfect intellect, there would not be a loop or hinge to hang a doubt upon. It would hold together from beginning to end in general and in particular, but there have been no such revelations. It would please me as much as it would any one else, I think, to believe that we inherited everlasting life and that our good deeds were rewarded and our evil deeds punished, but the evidence shows nothing of the kind. The most important command of any it to believe and be saved. Belief is an involuntary conviction of the mind. The idea of a man being commanded to do an involuntary act? Supose you were commanded to believe that I was a white horse, or something else contrary to the evidence before you, could you do it? No, even though you were to be everlastingly punished in case you did not. And to pretend that you so believed would not help you in the least. Creation! That is the stumbling block. People imagine that everything was created, having had a beginning and an end. Nothing was ever created. The better opinion is that material substance has always existed and will ever continue to exist. It is subject to continual change, however, in form and density and temper according to laws."

"The laws that prevail is this regard. It is the general belief that an all-wise mind superintends, and a perfectly-directed will controls all motions and changes that ma-terial substance undergoes; but clearly, the fact is otherwise; that matter merely folfact is otherwise; that matter merely fol-lows natural laws, just as a rock does when unsupported it rolls down hill, and all changes take place because it is in-evitable under the circumstances, and that, were there a directing mind supplied for this purpose, it would become deranged, for the reason that there would positively be nothing for it to think about."

"Your body is material substance," I suggested.

"Your body is material substance," I suggested.
"Yes, sir."

THE RECORD OF THE BAIN UP TO DATE.

The City Still Away Above High Water Mark—What the Churches Will do—Personal and General.

PASADENA, Jan. 19. — (Special Correspondence.) The rainfall as recorded at Glen Rosa amounted to 5.84 inches for this last storm, up to 3 p.m. today, making 7.37 inches for the month, and a total of 15.50 inches for the season, since September 29. inches for the season, since September 29. Mr. Nelmes says that last season was the most severe test for fruit trees during the thirteen years recorded. The rain came in small quantities, much of it in warm months, and thus dried up. At no time during the season did it penetrate more than fifteen inches. Practically, it may be said that not more than seven or eight inches fell in twenty months from March, 1893, to December, 1894. The thirty inches during the season previous to March helped to sustain some, and orange trees that have not been irrigated for fourteen years are looking fresh, but their fruit is smaller than usual.

SANTA MONICA, Jan. 19.—(Special Correspondence.) At the big wharf during the worst of the storm this week the elevated position of the hoisting engines on the coal bunkers rendered it impractical on account of the sweep of the wind to proceed with the discharge of coal from the Wellington. The boat therefore lay off the wharf at anchor until Saiurday morning, when the wind having fallen to a breeze the discharge of the cargo was resumed. The continuous rains have interfered with the discharge of lumber from the schooner Reporter, and she still lies at anchor in the stream.

The Building Boom - Orange Ship ments Stopped by Rain.

POMONA, Jan. is.—(Special Correspond). A gentleman who has recently h ments Stopped by Rain.

POMONA, Jan. 19.—(Special Correspondence.) A gentleman who has recently had a business trip to nearly every populous part of California, says that he knows of nowhere in the whole State a community the size of Pomona that is doing so much building as this city. In the past twelve months eightynine new houses have been built in Pomona, and nearly 200 erected in the last two years. At present there are twenty-one in process of erection in and about Pomona. All the carpenters, brick-layers, painters and masons are busy. In commercial structures Pomona has not had such a boom in several years. Just now over $55,000 is going into brick store buildings, and as soon as the winter rains are over three large commercial structures are to be begun on Second street and Garey avenue. By next August there will have been finished in Pomona over $120,000 worth of new store buildings of modern conveniences, and the latest improvements in such structures. There is a general feeling abroad in Pomona that the year 1895 is to be one of unusual growth and large business prosperity in all parts of the valley. At no time in several years have our fruit-growers of all classes felt so good a: the outlook as now. The orange-growers are more jubilant than in four or five years.

The dive crop in Pomona Valley has never been in such demand as this season. At the rate of calls for the pickled olives of Pomona there will be none left for oil. J. E. Pachard's olive orchard here may be taken as a fair indication of the profit there is in olive-growing when care and attantion are given the trees and business sense is exercised in marketing the crop. Mr. Packard has fifteen acres of olive trees, planted in March, 1888. From his orchard he has picked and, sold this season a: little over 19,000 gallom of fruit. He has had about 35 cents a gallon act for list yield.

TOUGH CHARACTER IN THE SANTA ANA JAIL.

The Republican County Executive Committee Declares for Per-kins for United States Senator.

SANTA ANA, Jan. 19. — (Special Correspondence.) It pow appears that John or "Jack" Harrington, alias John Matthews, alias John Marshall, is not the good, industrious boy that he would have some of the residents of this city believe him to be. Readers of The Times will remember that about a week ago he was arrested here on suspicion of being the party who robbed J. A. Jones' residence of about 440 in money and some small 'articles of jewelry and family keepsakes. There was little or no evidence against the fellow on this case, but he was a suspicious character, and Sheriff Nichols had him run in. Now it seems that he is a fortunate catch; that he is not only the one who, from present indications, burglarized Mr. Jones' home, but he is an old offender and is wanted by the officers in several counties in this State. Word was received here today from Los Angeles that an officer would be down to take a look at him; that he was believed to be a character that is wanted very badly in that city. If he is the person wanted these he is, while young in years, old and experienced in crime, and has twice served time in San Quentin.

As both railroads are in very had condition owing to washouts, the Los Angeles officer will now not likely set down to take a look at Harrington for a few days yet.

A Belated Citizen Hears Shots—His Imagination Does the Rest.

An excited individual named Jesse Brown, who lives somewhere on Bellevie avenue, approached Officers Robbins and Ritch on Nigger alley last night about 11 o'clock and told them that a big fight was going; on in a saloon on Wilmington street, near First, and that several shots had been fired. The fellow said he had fled from the place in fear of losing his life.

The officers immediately ran to the end of Ritch's beat at First and Alameda streets with the man in tow, and listened for a whistle call or sounds of a row, but none were heard. They also interriewed a patrolimen of insier's force who came from the supposed seat of war, but he said there was nothing in the story, so the officers swore softly at the citizen and assisted him on his way homeward.

Officer Fay, on whose beat the saloon is located, knew nothing about it, and the saloon fisself was not to be found. Officers

From other points rain was not reported.
In Los Angeles for the twelve hours, ending at 5 o'clock last night, the precipitation was .33, and for the twentyfour hours, .66, making 4.20 inches for the 14th inst.

Since the Weather Office was established in this city there have been seven seasons when 2.97 inches, the average record of January's rainfall, has been exceeded.
In 1878 the precipitation was 3.33 inches;
1879, 3.59 inches; 1884, 3.15 inches; 1886,
7.78 inches; 1888, 604 inches; 1897, 7.53 inches; 1893, 6.29 inches, and now the present storm has broken the average record for the initial month of the year.
The average rainfall for the season is 18.22 and so far the rainfall has measured 10.70, and whether this record is to be broken remains to be seen. The outlook in this unpleasant direction is encouraging.

Apart from the fact that many of the streets are flooded and others, particuarly in the suburban districts, are transformed into immense avenues of uninviting liquid mud, no damage of great moment has been reported. The miniature waterfall on the First-street cut continues to present a picturesque, if somewhat inconvenient, feature of the landscape. A portion of the sanja flume above the Buena Vista street bridge has been washed away, and serious damage might have occurred at

SANTA ANA, Jan. 19.—(Special.) Santa Ana is once more shut off from the outside world so far as railroad communication is concerned. Both the Santa Fe and South ern Pacific roadbeds between this city and Los Angeles are soft and in poor condition for traveling. Traffic either way, on both roads, was blocked today by washouts of greater or less importance. In fact the Santa Fe laid up for repairs Friday night. Santa Fe laid up for repairs Friday night. The south-bound train for San Diego left this city in the evening almost on time, but did not get as far as El Toro before it was ditched in crossing a culvert that had been undermined. The engine passed safely over, but the baggage and smoking cars went through and tipped to one side. Fortunately the train was running slowly and no one was injured. A relief train from this city was made up and sent down to bring the passengers back here as soon as word was received of the accident, but from this city was made up and sent down to bring the passengers back here as soon as word was received of the accident, but it encountered another washout this side of the wrecked train and had to return without having reached the scene of the wreck. The passengers therefore were obliged to spend the night on the train out on the San Joaquin ranch, through the dranching rain. Eearly this morning the train that lays over night in this city was sent on an inspecting tour of the road between Santa Ana and Orange and then it was sent south toward El Toro with a fist car of ties and a small force of workmen to open the way to No. 1 that had left the track the previous evening. At the time this report closed the worktrain had not returned or been heard from.

At 2 o'clock this afternoon a train arrived from Los Angeles, having passed safely over the break in the treatle just south of Fullerton, which laid out the north-bound train Friday evening and compelled the passengers to return to Anaheim for the night.

ON TME SOUTHERN PACIFIC.

No trains left ever the Southern Pacific coday. The train from Tustin was laid out at McPherson on account of a washout. Telegraphic communication was received early in the day that about the one thousand feet of track south of Buena Park was under water, and that the approach on the south side of the bridge over New River, near Norwalk, was washed away, and that the water was five feet deep. Later, in the day word was received that the roadbed at this point was washing out badly.

Over one and one-half inches of rain have failen since yesterday morning, and it is still failing, with indications that it will conclinue during the night. If it does continue, a great deal of damage will likely be done.

The Santa Ana River and Santiago Creek are booming. The banks are full to overflowing and the country roundabout is being flooded. The river has broken ever now on both sides, and the Newport country, as well as the Belsa country, is being deduged. Fifth street, west of the city, is a veritable mountain torrent.

Hundreds of people drove out to the river today through the rain. For several months during the year this river is simply a dry waste of sand, but its present condition entities it to be classed with mountain torrents. Several houses in the river bottoms are now almost surrounded with water, but as yet the residents have my moved out. As the country is rounded with water, but as yet the residents have my moved out. Deputy Sheriff Morgan arrived late this afternoon from Anahelm, having driven over in a private conveyance, and reports that a good portion of the Santa Ana River is running across the country just south of the "Mother Colony," near the junction of the Tustin branch line of the Southern Pacific road and the Santa Ana branch. He says the stream is about eighty yards wide, and that it has a good deal of velocity. He thinks it left the river up about Olive.

A heavy cloudburst in the mountains raised Lytle Creek six feet in an hour, and cut a new channel several hundred feet wider, carrying out the supports under the Santa Fe bridge on the Los Angeles division, and also the motor bridge on the Colton line. At the former a construction crew commenced work at 7 o'clock last evening, and in seven hours the delayed trains from Los Angeles passed over safely. Two trains in from the West today united and went out as overland this afternoon. The overland from the East is in this afternoon nearly on time. The freight sent around the loop division this morning got through, and the passenger set out this noon to follow. No trains on the Santa Fe are running to Riverside on time, transferring from the break to this city by carringes. The storm ditch at Redlands did great damage, cutting out a new channel, carrying off two houses and a barn and destroying much property. The motor road to Redlands is running all right, with but little delay. It is still raining with no signs of cessation. Rainfall for the storm is over five inches, and for the season, over fitteen inches.

Capt A. B. Smith, R. Stedham and C. Taylor attempted to croos Lytle Creek on the extension of E street during the flood which took out the central bents of the Santa Fe and motor bridges. Two horses were drowned and the men saved with difficulty.

AT REDLANDS.

AT REDLANDS. REDLANDS, Jan. 19.-Mill Creek zanja, REDLANDS, Jan. 19.—Mill Creek zanja, always an ugly stream at the time of a storm, last night and today did more damage than usual. The engine-house of the steam laundry and a small cottage were undermined and wrecked. The big boarded ditch of Drew & Wills was badly injured and is now seventy-five feet wide and twenty deep. The mountains are covered with snow reaching far down the footbills.

AT RIVERSIDE. RIVERSIDE, Jan. 19.—The heavy storm Friday night and today has shut this city out from the outside world very effectively as today no trains are running. The rainas today no trains are running. The rainfall was unprecedented, it being fully two inches in the past thirty-six hours with the rain coming down in sheets this evening. The floods have caused several washouts on the Santa Fe road, both south and north of here. The canals of the water company and also the large canals of the Riverside Trust Company have broken in many places. The large county bridge over the Santa Ana River, built at an expense of several thousand dollars a couple of years ago, was badly damaged and is in all directions are badly damaged.

Although it has been raining more or less since early morning (before daylight,) and especially so since 2 o'clock this afternoon, with an occasional premonition of probable wind, there has been as yet no damage done whatever in any way. There is, however, an anxious look upon more than one grower's face as to just how the wind may come in the break-up, should that occur by or before the early hours of the night; in fact, they would prefer a continuance of cloudy, rainy weather until the air should become less cold than it has been during the greater portion of this (Friday's) rain, but "sufficient unto the day is the evil thereot."

The soldier team will be picked from the following. Sergts, Albert Reynolds and A. F. Swisher, Corps. Davil Kinsey and C. S. Peak, and Privates Eugene Bassett, E. B. Noble, A. J. Casey and Arthur Splittstoesser. Sergt. Reynolds will captain them. The police team will be chosen from Officers Thomas F. Rico, Ed R. Smith, S. P. Hensley, J. W. Tyler, Willard Fowle, Frank L. Benedict, G. L. Johnson and Robert E. Lee.
All the men are crack chots, and are confident of making high scores. They will use Colt's revolvers. The match today between the rival police teams will probably not be shot, owing to the inclemency of the weather.

THROUGH THE BODY

A Fleeing Burglar Shot by Detective Auble.

He Refused to Surrender When Called Upon and Attempted to Escape.

Shot on the Run by the Officer, After Repeated Warnings—The Man's Ante-mortem State-

Detective Walter H. Auble shot William Bean, an escaping burglar, through the body, late last night, inflicting a fatal wound. Bean made an ante-mortem statement exonerating he officer.

Detectives Auble and Hawley reseived information that a burglary would be committed at the fruit store on the corner of Temple and Hill streets, and last night at 10:50 o'clock they remained inside after the proprietor had closed up. About twenty minutes later they heard a cutting and picking at a square window in the rear wall, and saw the burglar at work with knife and lock-pick. The fellow got the window open and pushed it inward. There followed a crash as the piled up boxes fell and the man turned and ran away with the officers in hot pursuit. He jumped the fence, Auble after him first, and ran around toward Castelar street. Auble fell in the mud but was soon following again, calling loudly three times: "Haft, or I'll shoot you!" The burglar gained Castelar street and was flying up the hill, so Auble fired two shots over his head. Hawley also fired a shot. These had no effect so Auble shot to hit the man as he was racing up the hill and got him low on the right side of his back. The bullet passed through his body and came out at the right nipple. The stricken man plunged over on his face and threw out his hands. "Don't shoot any more," he cried, "you've shot me

"I'm sorry," said Auble. "That's all I want of you."

"That's all right," answered Bean, "I'd have done the same, if I had been an officer." The detective helped him to his feet and they walked a little ways, but his strength gave out. Dr. Bryant, police surgeon, who lives near by, came out and did what he could to stay the blood, while Mr. Whitson ran to the station and summoned the patrol wagon.

At the hospital the doctor bound up wound and pronounced it fatal. at the dying man's request for a Protestant minister and gave the man all the consolation possible, which gave him much satisfaction. At the minister's request he made the follow-ing ante mortem statement: LOS ANGELES, Jan. 20, 1895.

He spoke as follows: "I, William Bean, do exonerate the officer who shot me, from all blame. He evidently did so in the execution of his duty. This is the first time I ever did such a thing in my life. I came here last Tuesday morning from Pueblo. Colo. I walked about ing from Pueblo, Colo. ## Moisture made prices. In consequence of the storm we repeat yesterday's report in part, with some additions, which will prove that we are offering values as a business, and it must be good business when we give you a chance to save money. If you can grasp the full bigness of the lots and the savings, you will be here.

More than two score and ten pieces of splendid allpure wool Scotch cheviots. Exactly 40 inohes broad, beautiful street colorings in two and three color shadings, they have never been a penny lower than the 50c mark. To give all a chance to share in this unprecedented offering.

As if the storm had wet down the prices. Two lots of Damasks, one real Turkey Red, the other a pure flax German linen, both of liberal width, both of such very unusual value as to at once command attention; 50 cents would ordinarily sell linens of same worthiness as fast as men could cut.

A scant one hundred pieces of excellent quality Outing Flannels, 28 inches broad, light and medium grounds, dainty stripes, the very sorts that perhaps you bought last week at 7 cents. Enough to last till 2 o'clock perhaps.

A lot of Men's Underwear, both shirts and drawers, only four hundred and fifty pieces all told. Heavy quality natural gray merino, self trimmed, taped seams, pearl buttons, the equal of any 75 cent garment you hear of. It BEATS any we KNOW of.

THE BOSTON DRY GOODS STORE

THE BOSTON DRY GOODS STORE
Is one of the largest and best-known establishments west of the Rockies, and the business of the past year has shown conclusively that more spacious quarters are necessary. In order to keep abreast with the growth of our city, excavations are now in progress opposite the City Hall on Broadway for the BOSTON DRY GOODS STORE BUILDING. It is to be four stories in height, with the front of light cream brick, also terra cotta. Immense plate-glass windows will illuminate the ground floor, which is to illuminate the ground floor, which is to be sixty feet wide and nineteen and one-half feet high. The architectural style up to the second floor is essentially Grecian; then occurs some Colonial decoration, and above that the Doric, as seen by the sketch. The windows on the second floor are equally large and massive; all this light is to be augmented by an immense skylight on the roof, throwing everlasting sunshine in abundance on the ground floor. No dry goods store in Los Angeles ever had enough light, and for the reason that no building ever has been erected here like this, especially for the dry goods business. The first floor is to be devoted to the retail, and the others exclusively to the wholesale business of the firm, which is now located on Temple street.

ers and employees and the transaction of business.

The offices are to be located on the ground floor, giving excellent light to the cash and book-keeping departments. Altogether, the building will be one of the finest dry goods stores on the Coast, an ornament to the city of Los Angeles, and will reflect great credit on the enterprise of one of our reputable business firms.

The business of the year has been most gratifying, sales in all departments showing a marked increase. An increasing trade requires additional floor space, and for the past year the firm has been sadly inconvenienced for want of room. This will all be remedied in the new building, where 4800 square feet of space will be available. The Boston Store Company enjoys special opportunities for the purchase of large quantities of goods in the Eastern markets; several buyers are engaged in its service, constantly on the qui vive for supplies and well posted on values.

All the present departments will be greatly enlarged, and new departments added, as the requirements of the trade demand. The name of the Boston Store has already become a household word in the homes of Los Angeles, and in their new establishment special efforts will be made to maintain the reputation already estab-lished. The new building is to be com-pleted and occupied by the Boston Dry Goods Store in readiness for the fall trade.

frames which fit out over the stomach all so light that the weight of them would be imperceptible, and as fine in their workmanship, as a Panama hat.

THE BIGGEST BOOK STORE IN SECUL I spent some time in going among the book stores and picture shops, and I found the merchants by no means anxious to sell, especially when I had Gen. Pak my interpreter, with me. I was warned to pay for everything on the spot, and I found that the nobility of Scoul and the high officials, with whom I was supposed to be connected, had a habit of taking what they pleased and never coming back way they looked upon me until I of three times as much as they expected to take, and everything is done by dicker-ing. I bought for about 50 cents a book which was first offered to me for $3, and this was at the biggest book store in Seoul. The books are all laid flat on the floor. They have flexible backs. Many of them look like blank books and accoun books until you open them, and you find them filled with Chinese or Korean characters. The merchant keeps his accounts with a paint brush, the clerks keep their hats on, and the average clerk is satisfied if he receives his clothes and food for his family and himself. I bought a Korear Korean printing establishment. There were no movable types, and the pages which were to be printed were engraved on boards. The printer laid one of these boards down on two blocks of wood, then mixed some lampblack and water on a flat plece of marble, and smeared this over the page. He then laid a proof sheet on it and and this constituted the printing. ONE OF THE KINGS PERQUISITES.

The King gets a big income out o brings about 5 cents a sheet, each sheet containing about as much paper I judge, as eight pages of this newspaper. I went through a paper factory, which is a stream. Some paper is made of bark reduced to pulp, and all the old paper is worked over. It is ground up into a sort of mush, and, when it is all in bits, a camboo frame is thrust into the mush and that which sticks to the frame maker and that which sticks to the frame makes a theet of paper. It is bleached in the sun, and is as strong as cloth. Now, the King gets his percentage out of the first sale, and he makes a big lot of money out of his examination papers. All office are supposed to be awarded by civil serv ice examinations, and at certain times of the year the students, by the thousand, come from all parts of the country, each carrying two or three of these sheets of paper. They are admitted into one part of the palace grounds, and they squat down under umbrellas, which they bring with them, and write essays in poetry. They have to wear a certain kind of cap, known as a scholar's cap, at this time, and each essay covers a sheet of this paper. It must have just so many verses and just so many lines to cach verse, and the students don't know what they are going to write about until they get inside the grounds. The subject is hoisted up on a pole just outside of a pen, in which the King and judges sit.
After the writing is through, each student folds up his essay in a peculiar way, and throws it over the fence of the pen. It is carried up to the King, and is spread out on top of a pile of papers, which grows to large proportions before the examination is through. Only a few pass at these examinations, and the re-jected papers are all sold by the King or by his officials, and there are hundred of houses in Seoul which are carpeted with the e cld examination papers. I wore a rain-coat made of oiled paper, which had been originally used by a Korean student

FREE LUNCH COUNTERS. Think of free lunch counters in Korea: Well, they have them in all parts of the country, and there is many a dirty little den in Seoul outside of which a clay oven is continually cooking free soup, and where you can get a bit of dried fish or a raw turnip without charge between drinks. The Koreans are less temperate than the Chinese, and I think, also than the Japanese. They like intoxicating liquors, and I met many reeling through asleep by the roadside, dressed in his long white gown and looking for all the world ber of fights and Gen. Greathouse-rather too delightedly, I thought-once said t

There are many saloons, and the sign pole above the door and which is of the kind through which the beer and other liquors are strained when they are made. This basket is usually about eighteen and you see them all over Korea.

THE DRUG STORES. The drug stores do not sell liquors, and they have very few fluids of any kind. Their medicines consist of powders and herbs, and patent medicines are as yet unknown in Korea. I believe a great big business could be done in both Korea and China by taking patent medicines out China by taking patent medicines out there and advertising them as wonderful cure-alls, using the "before and after taking" signs, especially. The field is a virgin one, and it ought to be worked. I went into one drug store in Seoul, which was walled with cabinets containing drawers about six inches square filled with all kinds of nauseous herbs. There were bags of medicine hanging from the roof, and the druggist was squatting on the floor with his hat on, making more medicine with his hat on, making more medicine both the Chinese and Koreans believe in big doses. They don't think a powder is worth anything unless it is big enough for a horse, and their great cure-all is ginseng. This we consider a weed in America, but it is one of the most valuable products in Korea, and the King has the monopoly of it. He has great farms which are watched at night by men who sit on platforms which have been built up in them to keep the people from stealing the, crop. THE CABINET SHOPS. The Koreans do some very good cabine work, and about the only things you can ing away are brass cooking utensils and bureaus. The brass is wonderfully fine It shines like gold, and is made in little foundries, which look more like black mith shops than brass works. Every thing is done by hand. The bureaus ar all trimmed with brass, and the funnies article or household furniture is the Ko box. Every man has his own bank of this kind. It is often bound with brass, and is made of oak wood about two inches thick, and the lock to it weight several pounds. The money is kept in this box, and is carried about on the backs of coolies or by servants, when a man goe put into the Korean safe deposits. THE KOREAN SAFE DEPOSIT. The Koreans have perhaps the best safe deposit system in the world, but it is one that works only during the winter. their money is in the shape of Korean cash, which is made in coins of copper and brass about as big as an old-fashioned red chet, with a square hole in the center. It takes 600 coins, or 3000 cash, to make an Apperican dollar, and about $20 is a good load for a man, and $40 would break down a bullock. During the summer the Korean capitalist lends out his money for 5 percent, and upwards a month, very india billock. During the summer the Korean capitalist lends out his money for 5 percent, and upwards a month, very judiciously placing it. In the winter, however, there is liable to be cold and famine, and it might be stolen, or his debtor might not be able to pay, so, as the cold weather approaches, he draws in his cash and puts it into his safe deposit vault until spring. Every Korean has his own vault. It is usually his front yard, which is walled off from the street. He has his servant dig up this to a depth of about eight foct and then the first cold, frosty night he spreads out a layer of this cash in the hole and covers it with a coating of earth. He has water thrown upon this, so that the cash is embedded in mud, and it is watched until Jack Frost freezes it tight. The next night there is another layer of cash and a second coating of mud. This is frozen, and so it goes on until there is a solid frozen mass of cash and gad, lying two or three feet below the surface of the ground. On the top of this the ground is also frozen, and the winter is such that the merchant can sleep without fear until spring.

A SINGULAR SWINDLE.

IMPUDENT IMPOSTORS COLLECT MONEY TO "RESCUE" POPE LEO FROM THE VATICAN'S "CELLS."

They Declare That a "Fake" Pope, Sitting in the Papal Chair Deceives the Whole College of Cardinals-Amazing Way in Which People Allow Themselves to be Duped by Pretenders.

(From a Special Correspondent.)

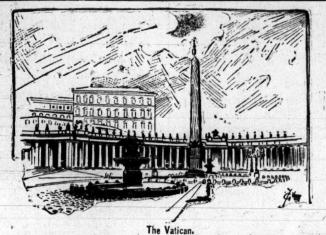

For months past the Vatican has been the victim of a widely ramifying conspir-acy involving nothing less than the identity of the sovereign pontiff himself. A syndicate of Italian swindlers has been reaping a golden harvest from the credulity of the Catholic faithful of humble stations

It is represented to plous Catholics in XIII at all, but an impostor who resem-bles him so closely in voice, ways and petsonal appearance as to deceive even Card-inal Pecci, the pontiff's brother. The pontiff was rendered unconscious to a cell in the vaults of the where he languishes to this day, and his enemy exercises all the authority of the Holy See. The swindlers made some effort to extend their operations to Ireland, but with indifferent success.

So far as this country is concerned, it is an embarrassing fact to the American Catholic prelates that vast numbers of the poorer immigrants, and even of the thriftier sort, are totally unprovided for in the way of religious instruction. They reach here in regiments, for the most part very slightly acquainted with American conditions and usually take up their residence in the foreign quarriers of the larger cities. Here they live in very slight contact with religious influences, as the overworked dioceses are unable to deal at all adequately with them. Their parish priest is often a stranger to them, although they are by no means parted from their religion.

This state of things afforded a very favorable opportunity to the agents of the swindlers in the United States. It is supprisingly easy to get the hard-carned money of the toiling population away from them, and the precise extent of the harvest reaped may never be ascertained. The victims have been enjoined to secreey for the ostensible purpose of not compromising the cause. Again all who

But in every great seaport and in the large coast cities the credulous foreigner has fallen an easy victim to the wiles of the advocate of the imprisoned Lec.

Leo.
In carrying out the scheme of imposition the impostors have been materially aided by the consummate art of Vittoria Bian-chetti. This woman is now about 30 years old, described as tall, dark and slender and endowed with singular powers of per-suasion. She represents in glowing terms the glorious mission of herself and her co-workers, and sets forth the spiritual treasures which the church will bestow upon all who undertake to aid the captive pontiff. Her language imparts a new sig-nificance to the melancholy interest attaching to the prisoner of the Vatican. She travels in luxurious style, dresses superbly and appears to be quite well supplied with ready funds. It is estimated that she has collected tens of thousands of dollars in ready funds. It is estimated that she has collected tens of thousands of dollars in the past two years as a result solely of the seductive sorcery of her smile. She is stated positively to be in this country. That our Italian population has been swindled by this woman many Catholic clergymen know but too well.

A very delicate point of law arises in connection with the swindle. The members of the syndicate assert positively that they are trutfully representing the facts—that the genuine Leo is in reality a prisoner, and that a fake Leo sits upon the papal throne. To refute this charge, the Pope himself, as well as his immediate entourage, would be obliged to testify in an Italian court. Even the prisoners now under arrest for participation in the frauds allege that they are acting in perfect good faith. Now, of course, the papal court refuses all recognition of the Italian government, and will not under any circumstances recognize an Italian court. This fact presents a difficulty. How are by the syndicate, which sent one of its most skilled operators to this country and he is believed to have netted large sums by his skill at imposture.

The man's name is indifferently Giovanni Traschetti or Cesare Cascaretto. He appears to be quite expert in deceit. He represents that a considerable clerical party in Italy has become acquainted with the imposture of the fake Leo and that it is designed to rescue the real Pope from his living tomb, place him back on the papal throne and deal with the impostor now seated there as he deserves. All this it is designed to accomplish, vindout scandal. The faithful may assist in this restoration of the deposed vicar of Christ by turning over the usual contribution of Peter's pence to the representative of the syndicate.

In many cases the swindler has been successful. Indeed, a very serious depletion in the amount contributed to the Peter's pence has already been noted at the Vatican. The Italian and Freuch populations have been far behind hand and the syndicate has reaped a vast reward from this diversion of the revenue of the

THE FLORIDA FREEZE.

Many Orange Groves Lose a Part of Their Leaves.

A special dispatch to the Florida Citizen from Manatee, dated January 11, says:
"It is now two weeks since the freeze, and we are able to judge of the damage done. The Citizen correspondent in the past three days has visited eighty-three orange groves, aggregating over 40,000 trees. Only four groves show their leaves all killed. About 50 per cent of the all killed. About 60 per cent. of the groves have lost 30 to 40 per cent. of their leaves, and the remaining leaves are green. Some groves at a distance look as fresh and green as before the frost. Among these are the groves of Dr. J. C. Felot, J. L. Hough, W. H. Vanderipe, J. J. Harliee, J. A. Sheaner, S. C. Gates, J. L. Wiggin, H. C. Vanderipe and many others in Manaterical and Johnson, Helma and Mrs. A. M. H. C. Vanderipe and many others in Manatee; also Johnson Helms and Mrs. A. A. Saunders at Oneco postoffice. The correspondent could name many others, but names these only to give people from a distance an opportunity to verify what we have written about the effect of the cold in this locality. The names given are among the leading citizens.

It is thought by the best judges that the orange trees will put on a full bloom, as the buds for forming new leaves are beginning to swell, and in some groves are putting out new leaves on the top of the trees where the leaves have dropped off. "The correspondent's observation has all been on one side of the Manatee River. The correspondent has been told by mea from the other side that not more than half of the lemon leaves are killed. "It rained all night the night of the 9th, which is another great blessing, as it will help the vegetable growers who are now pushing their work with vigor. are noticed in many directions. This is especially the case in Amador and Tuolumne counties, where work has been resumed on a number of shandored properties, while mines which have been worked all along are said to be yielding a better output than formerly. At several other spots on the Sierra a resumption of activity is reported by the local papers, though there is an absence of the usual beasting of big finds. Miners seem to be more inclined to look for their profits from digging in the earth than from sales to outside parties.

In mining circles it is common talk that the profits of some of the Sierra mines are much larger than the public suspects. One resident of this city is said to be drawing an income of $60,000 a month from his properties, whose names are hardly known, and men who are equally unknown are mentioned who are drawing their $100,000 a wast from the are noticed in many directions.

a month from his properties, whose names are hardly known, and men who are equally unknown are mentioned who are about it. Every geologist knows that the Sierra is full of undiscovered gold, and it stands to reason that some day it will be got out, in spite of the drawbacks under which hydraulic miring has had to labor, and the lean ores which are being hoisted from some of the veins.

If the gold-mining industry resumes its ancient activity, it will do so under far better auspices than formerly, for it will rely on sources of supply which are mot liable to collapse. At all periods of the world more money has been made by mining lean ores than rich ores. The latter are sure sooner or later to peter out, and the owner is likely to sink all his gains in fruitless pursuit for the solutions of miners at but to the legitimate miner for years and generations. The ores which are making the fortunes of miners at Wilwatersrand, in South Africa, rarely run as high as three-quarters of an ounce to the ton, yet they are outputting $40,000,000 of gold per year, and every one who has secured a few feet on the main vein is becoming a millionaire. The decomposed rock in which the gold is found is hardly ever either rich or absolutely barren; it yields a handsome profit to the operator who works it on scientific principles and with economical methods. So here the veins which are now being worked on the Sierra.

The new prospect is one upon which California is entitled to legitimate congratulation, for the influstry whose revival it presages will not this time contain a gambling element.

Maiden Tribute to China.

Maiden Tribute to China.

(Iowa State Register:) The Brooklyn, N. Y., Presbytery is all at sea over a grave question. For some time the churches have been laboring with the heathen Chines, trying with patience and industry to make good Christians of the pig-tailed, almond-eyed celestials. The heathen rather like it, for they have dietated their own terms. For instance, no Chinaman of marriageable age will consent to go to Sunday-school unless he has a teacher all to himself. Everything in Christianity, even to communion cups, now tends to "individuality." And he makes these additional conditions under which he is willing to embrace Christianity, or Christians: that the teacher must be a woman, and pretty. They want the best that it going, and there is said to be considerable rivalry among the celestials as to who has or who shall have the prettiest teacher. This is all very Christian and very lively—and generally the heathen falls in love with the Christian, rather than with Christianity. So many cases have come to revolting marriages that a protest has been raised against the whole system. Fathers and brothers and husbands do not want their women folks to come under the powerful influence of a pair of eyes set at an angle of forty-five degrees. They have raised a protest which the presbytery is bound to consider. Some even go so far as to aver that it is better that a few Chinese go to the place of fire and brimstone than that Christian maddens be sacrificed to get them to the other place.

All this is very interesting, even at this distance. If we laugh at the folly of these Christians, we cannot but admire the taste of the heathens. They seem to put a very high value on themselves and their conversion. Giving away chromos is an art understood by many business men, but the Chinese of Brooklyn insist that the chromo shall literally be a living picture. A great many sucrifices have been made for Christianity, but the Brooklyn malden tribute beats them all. It is an ungodly revival of the old idea that a woman i

NEW YORK THE MOST CROWDED CITY ON EARTH-DISTRICTS THAT ARE LIKE ANT-HILLS.

Startling Investigations of the New York State Tenement House Committee - The Life of the Crowded Districts -Poverty, Squalor, Disease, Misery and Death in All Horrible Forms-Inside View.

> BY EDWARD MARSHALL. Secretary of the Late New York State Tenement House Committee.

Four-fifths of the people in New York city live in tenement houses, and suffer more or less from the evils of the tenement-house system. How large a number this is better shown by giving figures. New York's population now amounts in round numbers to 2,000,000. This gives a tenement-house population of 1,500,000—larger than the total population of any other city in the United States. Chicago's population is 1,099,550; Philadelphia's, 1,046,964; Brooklyn's 853,945; St. Louis, 451,770; Boston, 448,477; Baltimore, 434,439; San Francisco's, 298,997; Cincinnati, 296,998; Cleveland's, 261,353; Buffalo's 255,664; New Orlean's, 214,039; Pittsburgh's, 238,617; Washington's, 230,322; Detroit's, 206,576; Milwaukee's, 204,468. Thus, New York has several hundred thousand more people living in her tenements than live in the entire city of Chicago. Her tenement-dwell-

A typical rear tenement-house. outnumber the total population of St. ton and Baltimore, three to one of San Francisco, Cincinnati, Cleve-d, Buffalo, New Orleans, Pittsburgh ington. Detroit and Milwaukee, reively, by a great deal more than five te. Therefore, the problem of their r management and the proper manproper management and the proper man-agement of their homes becomes one of the most serious in American municipal life. New York is trying hard to solve this problem. If she does so, it will have been solved for, all America, for New York's conditions apparently cover all phases of the great subject which are likely to arise

YORK THE MOST CROWDED CITY IN THE WORLD.

The importance of all this increases when another detail is added to the statement. This vast population in New York is con-centrated in a smaller territory than has ever before in the history of the world en occupied by so large a number, and tion is constantly increasing, it must, because of the physical conformation of the island on which New York is built, be confined to all time within the same boundarfined to all time within the same boundar-ies. In 1893 New York was the most city on the earth, with 1:22-10 ded city on the earth, with 1:2:2-10 ms to the acre for the whole city. came next with 1:25:2-10, and Berlin with 113:6-10, while Cologne tailed the mion of overcrowded cities with 10. There figures give no idea, howef the actual overcrowding of New city. For instance, in thirty-two of the Eleventh Ward the density as 800 47-100 persons to the acre, the entire Tenth Ward, after the area has been subtracted, contains average 623: 26-100 persons to the Nowhere else except in Bombay, are figures ever approached. The densest by the committee as being the worst in New York city, 4000 had paper on their walls. In 3800 of these 4000 houses the paper was torn and rotten. This is strong confirmation of the dector's theory. In a few of the better-class temements of New York, matting is laid upon the floors of halls. This adds somewhat to the appearance of comfort, but it adds greatly to the danger of germ spread and cultivation. A carpet exposed during all times and all weathers to the feet of a miscellaneous tenement-house crowd is certain to be filled with dirt and at times saturated with moisture. The chemist's gestine scarcely offers a better field for the cultivation of disease microles than do such carpets. Hereafter New York's tenements will be without thera.

Another most important recommendation touches the matter of lighting hallways. At the present time fully half of the tenement hallways in New York are dark during the days and badly lighted during the might. The evils of this system are great. First, comes the likelihood of injury to limbs and loss of life through falls on staffways. This actually plays a large part in the accident records of the hospitals, and must be of importance to any other city where the same condition prevails. Among the switnesses at the committee's public hearings was a widow, whose sturdy husband had left his home at the top of a high tenement building no later than 9 o'clock at night, to go for water. The halls were dark, and he etumbled at the top of the first flight of stairs. The lack of a gas jet there robbed a wife of her husband, three children of a father and the whole family of a bread-winner, Dark hallways are sure to be dirty hallways. Miss Ellen Collins, who reconstructed in Cherry street flithy rockeries into good, model dwellings, found that within a few hours after she had windows cut into the unspeakably filthy hallways, the tenant the sum of the buildings where their homes are located. A tenement is a big village in itself. It is not unusual for 100 families to be gwhered under one

TENEMENTS.

A condition of startling import which this committee has discovered, but concerning which it has but little to say, lies in the presence among the tenements of immoral women. During the last year and a half the police raids inspired by Dr. Parkhurst have closed most of the resorts hitherto devoted exclusively to the residence of that class. But these people have not been driven from the city. They have been scattered among the flats and tenement-houses. Where in the past they were concentrated in groups under single roofs, which sheltered no one not of their kind, they now occupy by ones and twos, apartments in the great tenement buildings, of which they must to some extent become a part of the routine daily life. Thus, while in the past they separated themselves as far as might be from those who did not seek their society, today they are forced by the very powers supposed to regulate their doings, into contact with not only hundreds of respectable people who have no desire to meet them, but with unnumbered thousands of ignorant and impressionable children upon whose minds the comparative luxury that comes from evil lives cannot well fail to have dangerous effect. This condition opens again one of the vasteet problems with which civilization has to deal, and it is not surprising that the committee, hampered by lack of time, confined itself to the statement of the condition it is true, however, that the results of this investigation show all too plainly that serious thought and active effort must be directed along this line.

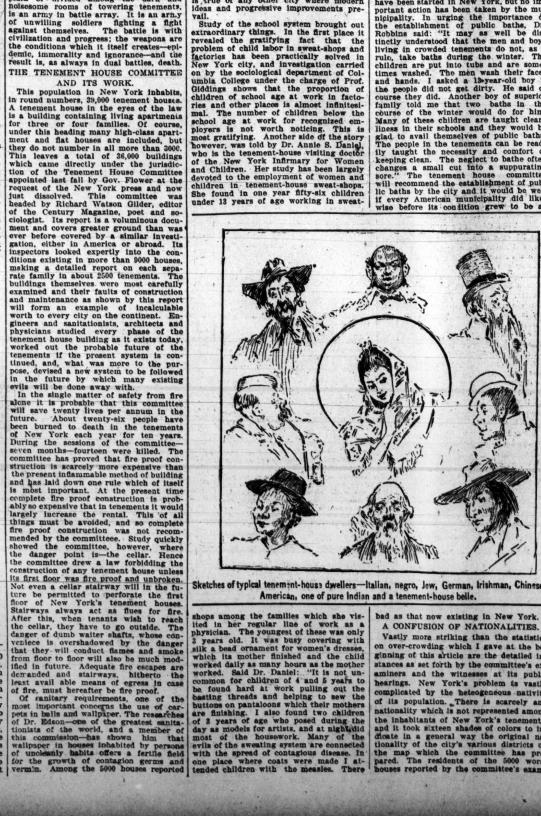

Another amazing discovery which this committee made, oncerns the lack of threathing spots in the metropolis. New York has been supposed to be fairly well supplied with parks. The report of the committee shows, however, that in a district of the East Side a population as numerous as the total population of San Francisco is entirely without park accommodations. It is scarcely probable that this is, true of any other city where modern ideas and progressive improvements prevail. TENEMENTS.

A condition of startling import which were lying ill on a lounge and were covered with the unfinished clothing on which the family was at work. Besides the family, other operators were in the room, and they slept there at night on shelves hung from the walls. It is extremely difficult to trace contagious disease communicated by clothing made in infected houses, but I have been able to follow one case with absolute certainty. In that shop children were ill with scarlet fever and were covered with the unfinished clothes. A woman took a pair of trousers to work on and the children in three families—her own and two others in the house where she lived—were attacked with the disease. PROPOSED PUBLIC BATHS IN TENEMENT DISTRICTS.

Another immense advance likely to grow out of this committee's work with be the introduction of public baths into the tenement districts of New York. In bad as that now existing in New York.

bad as that now existing in New York.

A CONFUSION OF NATIONALITIES.

Vastly more striking than the statistics on over-crowding which I gave at the beginning of this article are the detailed instances as set forth by the committee's examiners and the witnesses at its public hearings. New York's problem is vastly complicated by the heteogeneous nativity of its population. There is scarcely any nationality which is not represented among the inhabitants of New York's tenements, and it took sixteen shades of colors to indicate in a general way the original nationality of the city's various districts on the map which the committee has prepared. The residents of the 5000 worst houses reported by the committee's exam-

it becomes necessary to consider all their national characteristics. It must be remembered that the Irishman will drink whisky and shirk his work when he is drunk, that the German will stupity himself with beer, but that on the other hand he is a good husband and his wife is the best of mothers; that the Italian will run his death rate up to the highest in the city by devouring decayed fruit and vegetables, and that he will drink hard, and that the drink will kill him where it will only weaken another man; that the Jew will live in untold squalor, and that because of the low wages he receives he will crowd his home with lodgers, no matter how they it may be, or how many members there may be in his immediate; family, but that because his marvelous physical vitality, his observance of the Mosaic law in the preparation and selection of his food and his disincilination toward dissipation in any way, his death rate will be the lowest in New York.

All these things have their influences and all must be considered. The peculiarities of the Irish quarter are maddrunkenness and wife-beating; the peculiarities of the Irish quarter are maddrunkenness and wife-beating; the peculiarities of the negro quarter are petty gambling, drunkenness, deadly fights with knives and child labor; the peculiarities of the negro quarter are moderate cleanliness, steady drinking rather than drunkenness, the best family life that can exist in the tenements, a low average of general intelligence (due doubtless to the influence of beer,) thrift, regular employment, the great follow feeling; the peculiarities of the Jewish quarter are squalid rooms, and clean food, superhuman work, good health, high morals, overcrowding, intermittent employment, sweat shops and the conditions growing therefrom, complete sobriety and a general abstinence even from the tobacco habit, rigid fidelity of husband to wife and wife to husband, of children to parents and parents to children, general submission to outrageous oppressions by landlords or whoever has the mi

THE ITALIAN QUARTER.

THE ITALIAN QUARTER.

Overcrowding is not greater on Essex street in the Jewish quarter than it is in Mulberry street in the Italian quarter. In Little-Italy there is no such thing as home life. The Italian rarely comes to this country with the idea of becoming a good, American citizen. His idea is to work here at high wages long enough to save what will be a competency when he returns to the old country, and he regards America as a kind of purgatory which must be passed through before he enters the paradise of ease and prosperity in his native Naples. There is only one clean thing in the average Italian tementhouse room, and that is the bed. This is certain to be high, soft and spotless. It is in the bed alone that the Italian housewife apparently takes pride. The food is execrable, rooms frequently go uncleaned from the beginning of a family's tenancy until its departure, and the general effect of Italian residence upon a tenementhouse is had, yet the beds are alwaysciean. Although the evil does not reach as great a development among the Italians as it does among the Jews, the most fast-A court in the -lialian quarter.

They came in such numbers when the price was 5 cents a bath that the setting the beginner and the general effect of Italian residence upon is -leave upon is -leave upon the beginner of the beginner at the

in order to pay, his rent, and a careful tendency toward separation of the sexes and general discency is always apparent in such cases. The fact that he has no regard for vegitlation or for the sanitary rules other than that demanding cleanliness and foof, makes a puzzling point when one comes to figure out why his death rate if so low. For instance, one witness testified before the committee as follows: "I found one case of eleven people in two rooms in a rear tenement at night, and the rooms were close and uncomfortable. I asked the woman who seemed to be in charge why she did not open the windows. She told me that they would not open. I found that the windows had a fastening that was out of order, and had been nailed up at the top, because the sash would not slip down otherwise. I also found that had they opened the window's they would have got little air, for one foot away from it the brick wall of the adjoining house extended up above the second floor, so these, eleven people slept all night habitually in two rooms, having no ventilation whatever.

It is interesting to note that one of the committee's expert examiners having in charge the analysis of air, found the atmosphere in one Jewish sleeping-room to be so charged with carbonic acid that a lighted iamp, when taken into it, flickened and almost went out, yet human beligs; were sleeping there and apparently where none the worst for it.

Dr. Daniel, who has been quoted concerning sweat shops, gave equally interesting testimony concerning overcrowding. In one year she found 733 families, who took 339 boarders and lodgers. In another that 131 families had 311 boarders; in another that 135 families had 314 lodgers. It is also common for more than one family to occupy the same apartment. The most extraordinary case which came under her notice was of one family which had fifteen lodgers in three rooms. Two of these rooms were dark, and there were, besides the pirents, two children with scarlet fever in the family at the time.

The greatest evil of the teneme with scarlet fever in the family at the time.

The greatest evil of the tenement districts of New York—and it would be well for all other cities to note this fact now—is the presence of tenement-houses only twenty-five feet wide, but built for occupation by four families or more on each floor. The present committee has not in any place forbidders this although the entiments are clear upon this point, but it has so bedged the construction of tenement-houses round about with wise restrictions that it will be practically impossible in future. The gaining of this point is the most important work which this committee has done or could do. (Copyright, 1885, by S. S. McClure, Limited.)

A Devise for the Benefit of the Most Unfortunate.

A Selenium Eye Connecting with the Sight Center in the Brain.

An Instrument Which Converts the Printed Letters into Raised Let-ters or Points—Description of the Invention.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—(Special Corre-NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—(Special Correspondence.) Two very remarkable instruments have been invented of late by gentlemen connected with the Perkins School for the Blind, in Boston: D. A. Reardon, the superintendent of, the printing office in that school, has almost perfected an apparatus by whose use the thind can actually see. This device consists first of a layer of non-conducting material, such as vulcanized rubber. In front of this is an vocal, of selenium, with a rim of metal. The selenium is covered by a glass. This whole arrangement is not more than an eighth of an inch in thickness.

A current of electricity is generated by a small dry pile, which is carried in the vest pocket. This current is carried to the head of the person using the instrument, and passing through the brain to the opposite side of the head, is then led by means of metallic bow, or some other conducting medium, through the artificial eye before described and back to the dry pile, thus completing the circuit. The idea of claims that his device does afford an exact substitute.

A DEVICE TO ENABLE THE BLIND TO READ.

Another step has been taken by M. G. Furnel Master, at the same institution, who informs me that in the spring of the present year he invented an apparatus by means of which a blind person can read ordinary ink print.

The device is about six inches high, by five in diameter. The lines to be read are covered by the instrument, the close-fitting lower edge of which excludes all light from without. There is, howevar, an electric lamp within the case of the instrument which throws parallel rays of light through a lens down upon the characters is reflected upward, and by another lens magnified and appears upon a selenium receiver.

By a rather complicated arrangement above this receiver, on plate, groups of metal points or wires are made to project above the surface of the top of the instrument, which form true copies of the characters on the page below. Thus the printed characters are reproduced in tangible raised characters.

With this device properly adjusted, Mr. Furnel claims that any blind person who can read the embossed books of the blind can by the use of his invention, read any ordinary newspaper, book or piece of music printed in plain black on white paper.

Mr. Furnel's apparatus is founded upon a somewhat similar principle to that of the plain or the typewriting machine. Instead of the pressure of the finger, the points which designate by their number and arrangement the various letters of a printed page, are raised by the chemical reaction of the selenium.

The principle of both these apparatus is undoubtedly correct. It is only a question of the intimate knowledge of chemical reaction and correlation of force and of the proper selection of such materials as are best adapted to perform the function required.

HOW THE DEAF HEAR,

The deaf hear by reading the movements of the lips. Their flabby, toneless, vocal chords are developed by patient education in making sounds, and grow tense and taut. Thus is the miracle performed that the deaf hear and the dumb speak.

And the deaf hear well, too. For instance, I stand and speak a long sentence, looking straight forward, and a specially educated deaf child stands some two yards from my side looking toward me and converses with me by watching the movements of that very limited portion of my mouth which he sees. Nay, more, I stand in a darkened room, and the shadow of my speaking lips is thrown in sharp and exaggerated profile on the white wall, and the specially educated deaf child stands behind me and hears by watching the moving shadow lips, and Little wooden stars litter the school table, and he gathers some faint conception of how they stand fixed, or endlessly pursue their orbits, in the immensity of space. Color he does not understand, but color, you know, is a thing even the wisest of us can never actually know.

Some people say that the color is in the rose and some that it only exists in the mind's eye that sees it. Perhaps the latter statement is true, and perchance the blind man's brain is filled with the rarest, int of beauty. Only we can never compare with him because we have no common standard of vision.

A SHARP EYE IN THE BLIND MAN'S

A SHARP EYE IN THE BLIND MAN'S FINGER.

A SHARP EYE IN THE BLIND MAN'S FINGER.

What is this so useful eye with which the blind man sees at close quarters? It is his sense of touch. An illustration is reproduced in this article of the pacinian corpuscle. This nervous and arterial filsment with its surrounding texture it ararely visible to the naked eye. It illust all the toctile surfaces of the body, particularly the inner surfaces of the thumb, fingers and hand.

It is in this latter locality that it most delicately and wisely performs its function of touch—or rather of receiving those impressions of exterior objects, which, when carried to the brain by the afferent nerves, produce in one of its centers, now well known, the sensation of touch. If one were to dissect out these corpuscles in various parts of the body, he would find them developed much according to the locality in which they were found. Most deficient and most primitive in structure where there is least necessity for a sense of touch, and most elaborate and highly developed where that sense is strongest.

But just as the eyes of the deaf are sewonderfully developed and increased in their power for exquisitely fine vision, so that they are almost like what we call "instruments of precision." just so are these peakings corpuscles unusually developed in the fingers of the blind.

This illustration is of a corpuscle in a person who does not see. If you were to examine one of these corpuscles taken from the finger of a blind more delicate ramification of nervous and arterial fibers, an infinite number of delicate and tender filaments branching off the main stem shown in the picture.

There seems to be absolutely no limit to the development of this sense of touch of the blind. It is well known that they have an unusual aptitude for playing on the pieno. The deft and noiseless fingering of the keye seems to be almost an instinct with them. The peat up soul of music, finding no outlet through their blind eyes, streams in a generous food down their fingers and over the ivory keys.

Nor is this he had graduated a Karl Bitter from his school. It is entirely conceivable that there is as extensive a field for the practical education of the blind in clay modeling as in music. So touch is the first eye which kind nature supplies to the blind man in place of his sightless orbs.

THE INSTINCT OF ENVIRONMENT. And then there is another thing helps him, and which can almost be called an eye. We all know how unmistakable is the feeling when we enter an old room, even in the dark—the feeling that that room has lived in, that human beings have made that room their social, sanctuary and home for years. The more habitated the room has been the stronger is the fragrance of human life when we enter. Shall I call this feeling an instinct of environment? Well, the blind have this instinct phenomenally developed. It helps them to walk along a crowded street without bumping into people. It carries them up and down stairs and along intricate passage ways, and around corners with an unfailing sense of destination. They feel where they want to go, and they know when they get there without the help of their poor blind eyes.

The Reardon apparatus.

Closely connected with this second eye, or instinct of environment, forming indeed an integral part of its truth, is the fact that the blind unquestionably feel the presence of a tree cr building when they are approaching it. This simply seems that the waves of the air, like blinds on the shores of the sea, throw back echoes of sound which are not appreedable to our ears, but do certainly strike most distinctly on those of the blind. And this is very natural, because their loss of sight renders the mind thoughtful and attentive and much more watchful and quick to hear. The blind will tell you that they hear a tree or wall which they are approaching.

What the Russian People Expect and What Alix is to Hinder-The Defeat of the Third Section-How the Subjects of the Empire Look Upon the Advent of the "New Crowd."

(From a Special Contributor.)

MOSCOW, Jan. 8.—(Special Correspondmosc.) There are three things the Russian man of the people.

The pressing question of today is: "What does Nicholas II. understand of the situation, and how far will his understanding influence his actions in the near future?"
The day before the wedding of Nicholas
II. with Alix of Hesse, two men were would today be in a state of anarchy, for there would be worse than anarchy, for they have a good deal to wait for; and if they could not fight, the Russian empire would long since have gone down among the ruins of dead monarchies. Whom is it that the Russian—the real, sure-enough Russian, of whom the outside whom does he fight for?

Some of those all-knowing foreigners, who have come to our land for three months, and joined our demi monde in its revels and our lesser officials in their state ople—the masses—to the authorities— e government—the system!" The Russian moujik submit to a system!

What does the moujik know about a system? As well talk to your mule about tem? As well talk to your mule about calculus.

The Russian man of the people knows nothing of systems or governments. To him the word "Privitelstvo"—executive department—is a hateful sound, when he recognizes it. Above all things, the Russian man of the people does not submit—he loves and waits. When he gets tired of doing these two things he does the third—he fights!

It took Catherine half a lifetime to find out these facts. It took Alexander II. fifty years, and Alexander II. never found it out at all. But Peter the Great and Nicholas I. found it out before they ascended their thrones and for this reason these two men, so different in character,

"Why do you hold out against a demonstration tomorrow?" one asked of the other.

"Because," was the answer, "I have learned the same lesson which I have reason to believe Nicholas has learned. Terrorism is not the thing. We must have love to succeed."

And so Nicholas had the benefit of the doubt, and the foreign journals were cheated of many startling cablegrams and the Russian journals were spared black borders.

These two men are still waiting.
What for?
For proof of their theory.
And this is where all Russia is today and is liable to remain for some time to come.

What, then, does Russia expect?

Nicholas II. has been called "The Stupid" so often that people are at last beginning to ask themselves the reason for it. As is usually the case, they are astonished to find no explanation bandy.

Perhaps the only excuse for calling Nicholas II. "The Stupid" is the one that he has allowed himself to be so called. For of the entire line of the Romanoffs he, least of all, has deserved such an unenviable title. For Nicholas II. is by no means the ignoramus people think him.

he, least of all, has deserved such an unenviable title. For Nicholas II. is by no means the ignoramus people think him. If he were he would not this day be upon the imperial throne of all the Russias. Were it really thought by those who have means of knowing that Nicholas II. is other than a man of far-seeing wisdom and generous impulses, the the day of his wedding would not have passed without a "demonstration." People who remember March, 1881, know what a "demonstration" means in Russia.

Nichalos "has a hard row to hoe," And the reason for this is that he has not yet earned his throne at the hands of the Russian people. He has done nothing as yet to win their love. It is no compliment to his sagacity to say that he recognizes the fact that he must do so very soon or suffer the consequences—which are serious in Russia. In this respect he is much less fortunate than was his father, Alexander III. The late Czar had an advantage over his son in the fact that he ascended his throne while it was tred with the blood of his father, and with him he carried the sympathy of the generous Russian people. Hence it was not necessary for Alexander III. to do much to make firm his hold upon his sceptre. But with Nicholas II. it is different. He has come to the throne after his father's long and tedious illness. No vioglent death has shocked the people into pity for him. Instead of streams of hears, a few well-learned speeches greeted the body of the dead Emperor during his passage across the country and at the dinner given to the poor of St. Peteraburg, one moujik was overheard telling another that it would not be a bad idea to have death, accessions and weddings of emperors every day, if all the extras came with them. The fact that both peasants were arrested and got sixty lashes apiece does not destroy the significance of the matter. To one who recalls the tears, curses and lamentations of '81, '82 and '83 this occurrence is of more than passing interest.

Every one remembers the startling rumors which came from Livadia just refore the death of Alexander. Nicholas is disliked by his father, said one; Nicholas is not to succeed to the throne, said another. One little incident the outside world heard nothing of is significant.

Late one afternoon while Alexander was lying on his death bed, Nicholas came up and busied himself at a nearby table. The Czar looked at him intently for a

Alexander III well knew that his son could not keep the throne on the basis on which he had kept it. He knew that his successor would have to make those concessions which he had never been able to bring himself to make. He had, in fact, brought Nicholas up with that idea in view and had found him a too-promising pupil!

That was why Alix of Hesse was brought in. A man who could openly express a desire to make a Jewish actress his wife must have a curb put upon him, said the Czar, and that curb was Alix.

This is the Czarina's position in Russia today. She is the check by which the Czar, it is supposed, will be held within bounds. How long it will be before he kicks over the traces is a matter of conjecture.

For Nicholas II is a man who has studied. Alexander III well knew that his son and the Czar by turns threatened and implored.

Then the combined efforts of the reyal family won the battle. The Czarowitch gave his solemn promise to his dying father, and the latter passed away only half assured that his son would carry out his pledge.

Now, why all this anxiety?

present moment does not know its own standing. There has not been an arrest in many, many days, because the Czar has no liking for arrests. The First Secretary of the section came with some official documents a few days ago and asked for an audience. No one expected a refusal. The First Secretary did not know the meaning of refusal. What did the Czar do? He told the official to go back to his office, as he was busy preparing for a visit of inspection in the city. This was a bitter pill for the Thrd! No spies, no military escort, no rows of gens d'armes—just a carriage

Nicholas II has not as yet become religious. But the holy synod is not going to allow him to slip through its fingers. From its central office in the Kremlin at Moscow it keeps a sharp eye upon the ruler. And it has found a point of entry.

Do you remember how Alix refused to anathemetize her childhood's religion when she was received into the Greek Catholic church?

She has got all over that. Today she is church?

She has got all over that. Today she is the firm ally of the holy synod. Pobledonostieff is delighted with her. You'll hear about it by cable pretty soon—when it suits the pleasure of the holy office to make it public. Yesterday she, together with the Grand Duchess Xenia, who has served as a pathmaker, were both received into the Holy Palestine group.

Alexandra Feodorovna, as all those who Holy Palestine group.

Alexandra Feedorovna, as all those who are connected with the royal family have already found out, is a woman of no angelic temper. The other day she went into a rage because a deputation of mouliks insisted on paying their homage to the new Empress, and it was only by swift retreat that they escaped dark cells and bread and water. The Czarina has not a particle of love for her spouse, and there is already a breach between her and the mother of the Czar.

This much for the women. But what is Nicholas doing meanwhile?

In similar for the women. But white is Nicholas doing meanwhile?

Nicholas is thinking. Those who expected that his accession to the throne would be marked by amnestles, opening of long-sealed prizon doors and restorations, have been wofully disappointed, and yet every one feels that something is coming. Nicholas has been asking some queer questions. He has given the Imperial Council not a little worry by popping a question about zemstvos (district governments,) church schools, government representations, taxes and similar things. He has even gone so far as to express an opinion that the prevalence of epidemics is not due to the will of God only! And the aforementioned officials raise their hands in astonishment, and want to know what we are coming to!

Six months ago it was an act of high by several members of the Imperial Council:

"I wish my grandfather Alexander had had time to revise the 'plan."

Welcome words are these to the ear of the liberal Russian. They mean that Nicholas knows that his royal grandfather was about to proclaim that "plan." for which the Russian people had so long waited, and which they had finally become tired of waiting for. It means that Nicholas knows he has not the love of his subjects, that he realizes they have become tired iof waiting, and fears that they will soon take to fighting.

Perhaps the following incident, which the public has heard nothing about, may serve best to illustrate the Czar's position:

tion:
Among the many papers which are daily submitted to the Czar for signature, and which he rarely, if ever, glances over, there was one in which he happened to notice the name of a well-known liberal-minded Prince X. Looking over this with some curiosity, he was surprised to find it a commitment to the Fortress of Peter and Paul. He sent to the Minister's office in a hurry, and the chief secretary came riding to the palace at breakneck speed.

"Young man," the Czar asked, "what is this for?"

"The Prince has seventy-two incendiary

"The Prince has seventy-two incendiary books in his house, your Majesty."
"Against persons or the State?"
"The State, your Majesty."
The Czar's fip curied. He took the commitment between his hands, tore it in two, and, throwing it to the Chief Secretary exclaimed:

tary exclaimed:
"Take this and yourself back to your office!" As the crestfallen official started for the door, the Czar added in a lower voice:

"And burn those books!"
Nicholas knows that a change is inevitable, but the inherited spirit of hesitancy in keeping a whole empire in suspense.
But the first step has been taken. Pri-

But the first step has been taken. Private orders have gone out for the Third Section to "go into winter quarters." In other words, we may soon expect to see this dread body a thing of the past. This is a substantial step in advance.

For the once, and for the first time, Alix of Hesse has experienced a defeat. All Russia hopes that the Russian superial charger will soon take the bit between his teeth and run away altogether. Then, indeed, the dawn will begin to break for darkened Russia.

Perhaps no less significant incident than

This, then, is the position of the Russian people and their master today. Nicholas realizes full well that he cannot expect to hold his throne by merely sitting on R. He knows that he must take some step in advance, as his grandfather did before him. He must give the people something, and the only question is: What and how great will that something be?

A few days age eight gentlemen met in a certain house and discussed the problem.

Nicholas has his problem all laid out for him, but it is no easy matter to find its right equation. Is it to be a parliament of the people? Is to be an advisory council of the governments? Is a real constitution to be granted? Is it to be a simple manifesto of increased civil rights? Is the economical question to be touched? Is the church to be mentioned? Is the percogative of absolution to be retained? These are some of the questions with which the new Emperor is having a tussie.

Perhaps the most significant words that Nicholas has ever uttered were the following, which he allowed to be heard the ground slipping away from under his feet, and the portfolio of the ministry from between his hands.

No better criterion of the uneasy feeling prevailing throughout the circle of official life could be cited than the action—which rumor ascribes to the august Imperial Council. That executive department, at it hast session, actually neglected, so it is said, to consider and—as is the inevitable custom—reject the usual batch of petitions for elemency towards political offenders!

When we take into consideration the fact that such a thing has not occurred in something like seventeen or eighteen years, the full significance of the omission cannot fail to be appreciated everywhere by the most superficial charves of things Russian.

The only man who feels that he is secure is Father Ivan, who attended the late Czar to his last day. On him the new Czar is lavishing his affections.

So, while the Czar is planning and the Czarina is scheming and the Holy Synor is mining, the Russian people are wallsing; but they will not wait long.

The old Italian legend of the Vampires, who had blood lines for lips, makes us yet distrust very red mouths. It is said cruelty, sensuality and rapacity are the traits of women who have them. Poppiae owned such a mouth; so did Cleopatra.

A full mouth, without sensuality, broad in the middle, with a deep cleft under the lower lip, is the maternal one. You can look to her for whole-heartedness, generosity and motherliness. She will be sympahetic in trouble, children will cling about her skirts. When to the mouth is mated that brooding look of tenderness in the eyes, it is the face of the "born mother," the home-keeper, the silent power, the mouth from which children learn the Lord's prayer. In short, it is the womanly mother, the highest type of all. Mrs. Cleveland is an excellent illustration.

The Rage for Blouses; the Dress of Young Russian Girls in Paris— French Legislation on the Question of Stays.

PARIS, Jan. 10, 1895.—(Special Correspondence.) When a deputy in the French chamber, the other day, proposed the tax on corsets as being a market staple, he only put in prominence the fact that there was never a moment perhaps in the history of French dress when the fashionable woman could se easily dispense with the corset as now. Blouses are the only wear of the fashionable woman, and a corset underneath is a matter of habit and not at all of necessity. It habit and not at all of necessity. It could be ahandoned and leave the effect of the waist unchanged. The proposition was stupid. French politicians seem not to keep up with the dress movement any more. It was not thus shortsightedly that Richelieu ruled in trade interests, when he decreed that the French should not wear lace but might wear ribbons. If the chamber wants the women's aid to augment the exchequer, it will have to

If the chamber wants the women's aid to augment the exchequer, it will have to try again.

Today all the variety in dress is expended on the blouse, and all ingenuity is absorbed in making of it a new creation for every new gown. The skirt can be left pretty much to itself, since its form has become fixed for some time to come, and it is mostly left innocent of trimming; but among all these blouses, there is in common only the neck band and belt, which are invariably of velvet, shirred and fastened behind with the gathered flanges that have so much pleased for more than a year. It is easy to vary this effect, because, as the material is not stretched over the figure, it takes decoration like any oriental dress that falls loose; whatever is done to it is in the way of enriching the fabric. It is made both both high and desolette, for it is worn at breakfast, dinner and ball, and it is made of every material and of several materials mingled. It is like the skirt or it is unlike the skirt. A street tollette has a blouse of dark blue velvet above a plain skirt of blue serge. The velvet is all in side plaits, turning toward the center, and falls over the belt behind as well as in front, with the square effect that is a part of the style. Sable epaulettes are over the shoulders, and the tippet and muff are sable. The whole is shadowed with an enormous black hat, trimmed with plumes.

For a four-o'clock visit is a blouse of fawn velvet, with the front stamped out a jour over cream silk and embroidered with iridescent beads, and a skirt of silk of the same color, shot and broched with green. Toque of fawn velvet and green. For an unceremonious dinner is a blouse of dahlia colored silk, striped at wide intervals with black lines, gathered on to a yoke of black velvet, with a black velvet belt. The sleeves are a large puff, reaching over the elbow, with a bracelet of black velvet, and are made full by being gathered up along the inside seam.

Theater blouses.

This blouse has the effect of three enormous puffs, all of a size. For an elaborate dinner is a toilette of deep old rose velvet, the blouse front, skirt front and sleeves brocaded with white. The neck is slightly low and square, and is bordered with sable; the sleeves are long and gigot. Over the shoulders epaulette pieces fail down, back and front, of plain velvet, bordered with sable. Another toilette is of Nile-green velvet, green crepe and white lace. The blouse is a square decolette, low in front and half low behind; the front of lace over crepe, and the back of velvet, with a plaited butterfly bow at the top of velvet, lined with rose, that fails over each shoulder, giving a yoke effect to the front. The sleeves are velvet and creps; and the skirt has the back velvet and the front and sides of creps, caught with velvet bows lined with rose, the creps gathered at the waist and falling full and loose. Belt of rose velvet. THE THEATER BLOUSE.

For the theater a blouse of red mousseline de sole, all accordion plated, the front covered with black lace and sewed in the front of each armhole a black lace tab, that falls out over the sleeves and gives a wide effect to the front. Another, of pale green mousseline de sole and black velvet; the back is of the velvet, the front to the width of two inches before each armhole is of the velvet also, and the remainder is of the mousseline, platted and falling very bouffant. Across the bust a broad band of velvet, ornamentally cut, is fastened with ribbon rosettes to the velvet on each side. The sleeve is a velvet puff, slashed down the middle over the platted mousseline. Neck-band of black velvet, with rosette on each side. All the velvet in front is studded with mock diamonds.

DRESS OF RUSSIAN GIRLS. DRESS OF RUSSIAN GIRLS.

The young Russian girls in Paris furnish some instructive ideas in winter dress. Their furs they wear with much taste and simplicity, making them produce an effect of luxurious warmth, where the rest of us, as though embarrassed with their disposition, cut them up into fantastic trimmings; also, they have a decided preference for plain, heavy wools, notably serge, as against the fancy wools liked by French women, and these they make in plain, substantial form, somewhat as English women do, only not with the same tasior cut.

The form is likely to be a jacket of The form is likely to be a jacket of one-third length, or shorter, double-breasted, with ample facings of fur, and a shirt cut fashlomably and sitted for all trimmings, and a blouse which may be of velves. It is in a dress made like this that French women also this winter dress their unmarried daughters. The effect is practical, unpretentious and elegant, and is accomplished with little apparent outlay.

Serge is the common wear of the most aristocratic women in the colony, as well as of the 200 young Russian women here at work in the medical schools, to whom it is almost a second cuticle; thus the Princess of Georgia and her daughters at the Sunday service of the Russian church are almost always in serge, block or dark blue.

The following models will be found useful for the wardrobe of young girls:

A brown and white mixed serge is made with a jacket like that described, buttoned warmly down with big horn buttons, with facings of otter fur. The skirt has two marrow rows of astrakhan bordering a three-inch band of velvet; the blouse has a binding of astrakhan at the top of the neckbard and at the wrists, which run out in long points on the hand; the jacket has the back cut loose and confined to the waist in gathers by a strap that passes over the back and underneath the front. It has an astrakhan collar that turns up round the neck, and a broad, seven-inch facing of astrakhan down the front. Another of the same materials has the plain skirt turned over down the back seam, to form a panel faced with velvet. The blouse is of serge, with yoke and belt of velvet, and the jacket is all of astrakhan. A skirt of black serge, with a blouse of black and white check velvet. course, that the country to which they belong is an adherent to the Red Cross treaty.

By applying the foregoing principles one will readily grasp the reason why Japan is doing such effective and commendable work as a humanitarian mation. She is carrying out to the letter the spirit and the obligations of the Geneva Red Cross treaty, to which she gave her adhesion in 1856, while her Emperor stands at the head of her civil Red Cross Society. In six great wars the Red Cross has been conspicuous. Written history records the beneficent work it has done, but only unwritten history can relate the prevention of untold misery and suffering on every field.

In the present war Japan, as a Red Cross nation, meets difficulties and dangers unknown in any former war where the Red Cross has worked, from the fact that her enemy. China, is not a nation signatory, to the treaty of Geneva, hence humanity is shown on one side in the treatment of sick and wounded, while inhumanity runs riot on the other.

Only These Should Marry—Mrs. Pa-ran Stevens's Legerdermain Par-ties—Mind Reading and Hypnotism.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12, 1895.—(Special Correspondence.) Society folk must have something besides social functions to interest them. Palmistry and astrology have both had their sway for two seasons. There is not a fashionable woman but knows her future, her fate and her disposition—that is, if she brought a devotee's faith to the science.

The present vogue is telepathy. People want to see if transmission of thought is possible, and if they can compel others to do their bidding by an unspoken desire.

Mrs. Paran Stevens pays large sums of money to noted conjurers for an appearance at her entertainments, amusing the guests by all that is weird in mindreading and feats of legerdomain. It is, therefore, a natural result that fashionable attention should turn toward psychical experiments. These evenings devoted to telepathy at fashionable houses are the outcome.

The regulation exquisite dressing, elaborate supper and Lander's Orchestra are the accessories for a "telepathy party." The modus operandi is to arrange the question of the single school of the single power, puts her mind upon a certain thought, and she must will it that the working of her brain is transmitted to articles, pours out a glass of water and hands it to some designated guest, etc., etc.

The papers have been humorously referring in an anonymous manner to a young acclety couple recently bethrothed, who, it is said, found their affainty by the fitting in of the vibrations at telepathy parties. Not half so bad an does this, for the advocates of the failure of marriage to propose, in determining the congeniality of parties. Instead of the assal courting, when man and woman try to find it tasks agree by the medium of even insincere language, they could hold hands and fervently think. If comparison proved a simultaneous working of brains, the couple's destiny would be salved. Imagine the fin de siecle Juliet exclaiming to her Romeo, "I am thine forever. The vibration of the molecules of my brain go with a right-hand rotary movement into yours, and the two fit together as strands of rope."

There is an army surgeon at Governor's Island who, his friends assert, can compel his opponent to make whatever move on the chess-board he wishes by transmission of thought. His invariable success has earned him the sobriquet of "Ajeeb." but since his success has heen confeasedly assigned to telepathic power, a game with him is the most interesting afternoon event at the club. the person whose hand she holds. The receiver of this thought adds something to it and in turn sends it on through the electric ourrent of her fingers to her neighbor's brain. This transmission is continued around the entire circle. When the last guest is reached, the hands remain in touch, while each person relates the product of her brain, and to be up to professional standards the thought should have grown as naturally as an acorn to an oak.

This successful result is what the women who are giving so many hours to its study aum for. As a game for the morning hours it is outrivaling duplicate whist in popularity, and some of the young women who won trophies in that field are fitting themselves to be victors in this contest of mind-reading. Even the debutantes, who naturally consider life made of tea, roses and dancing, are inclined to be patronizing and join in the amusement. One "bud" confessed that she and her boon friend held hands through the sermon on Sundays and compared thoughts afterward, "and," she added, "we generally succeed, for there is nothing to distract us, you know, and we can't talk."

As for the science of telepathy, it is only old wine in a new bottle. "Its the old-fashioned mind reading, an inferior sort of hypnotism, that has amused the gay little circles at army posts in the West for many years. The child who used to say at school, "Can you tell me what I am thinking about?" thought it most wonderful if the companion guessed right; but the enthusiastic smart woman of today will tell you that it has its proof in a scientific fact; in a word, vibrations.

deriul if the companion guessed right; but the enthusisstic smart woman of today will tell you that it has its proof in a scientific fact; in a word, vibrations. That sight, sound, thought, are each the product of the air waves. You admit that, and she goes on with her theory. "Now." she says, "your medium is the person whose brain vibrations fit into your vibrations. Each person has one peculiar to herself. Yours may be a right-hand rotary motion and hers a left-hand rotary movement, and when you try to bring them together, they

The Fashionable Confection for an Afternoon Tee Table.

[from a Special Contributer.]

A very presty fancy is to get a carpenter to make a little low table of pine and then to enamel it yourself with white paint. If you want something more expensive, have it made of cherry, and then paint it with a cluster of magnolia blossoms or chysanthemums.

Primarily, I believe such tables were designed for five-o'clock tea, being just about large enough to hold a dainty cup and saucer. This is a custom now as deeply rooted here as in England, is it not?

Some Rich and Quaint Old Instruments of Long Ago.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—(Special Correspondence.) Every one who has visited Leipsic remembers the Musik-historische Museum. That this collection of historical Leipsic remembers the Music aistorisate Museum. That this collection of historical instruments and musical curiosities may some time find a home in the Metropolitan Museum of New York is not only possible, but probable. In view of this event, it may be interesting to get some idea of them. They have been gotten together by Mr. de Wit; a namateur musician.

Mr. de Wit; a treasures differ from those now in the Metropolitan Museum and presented by Mrs. John Crosby Brown, in that they are mostly instruments of European make; their age or historical connection making them valuable. For instance, the little hammer-clavier, shown in illustration No. 1, probably belonged to some belle of the sixteenth century, and served a double purpose—it furnished music and was, at the same time, a receptacle for her thread and needles and the various belongings of a work box. Behind the mirrer, in the cover, is a space for writing material.

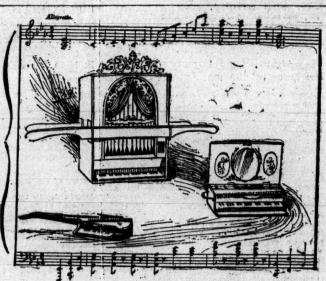

Another curious instrument is a clavichord, from which the bianc of today has in the cover, is a space for witting mare-rial.

Another curious instrument is a clavi-chord, from which the plane of today has been evolved. When closed it resembles a Bible, presumably the family book, as it is somewhat ponderous.

An old Italian portable organ, shown in illustration No. 2, was used in processions upon restival occasions or for funerals.

The gay cavalier who sallied forth of a moonlight night to sevenade his lady-love, when this century was young, sometimes took a guitar, but more often he carried an orphica (illustration No. 3) which was a clavier in the form of a couched harp.

parts of water, which makes it very strong. This used as a wash, is nearly always effective for the time being, but other measures are necessary for a complete riddance.

Ants usually appear in the pantry or plete riddance.

Ants usually appear in the pantry or celler-way, and invade everything they find. Sugar, flour, etc., so affected, should be scalded with plenty of hot water, to kill those already there. Thee everything should be removed from the shelves and ceriding water poured over. Corrosive sublimate solution may then be poured around, and when the shelves are dry, blow, with a powder beliows, red peoper in every crack and crevice. It is unlikely they will ever return.

Rats and mice are more difficult to deal with. Poison is out of the question in the summer, for they always choose a place in the house to die, Traps fall to ensnare them. The only plan to drive them away absolutely, is to get a quantity of potash, put it in the sun till it becomes soft, and then, with a stick, smear every hole that can be found. Sooner than walk through this a rat will change his abode. From a druggist who sells glass get all the pleces they throw away, pound fine and throw in the holes. Being sharp it will cut their feet. This combination, potash and glass, is a never-failing cure.

Roaches are among the most persistent pests that invade the house. Get equal parts of Parls green and borax, and, at night, set around their haunts in old dishes. They will die away like magic. Sometimes they are found in desks, especially in offices. This preparation scattered freely under the bottom paper will rid the drawers of them. It is almost impossible to get rid of bugs in a soft two does not be a softer wood. Then all the beds in the house should be given a turpentine bath, pouring it into all the cracks and crevices. The spring should have an extra good dose, and the edges of the mattress; examine the bed spring and mattress; examine the bed

The sea-trumpet, also called a nun's fiddle (illustration No. 4) was used in church music, especially in nunneries, as a substitute for trumpets. The name "sea-trumpet" arose from the fact that it was frequently used on ships when entering port to signal for a pilot. These instruments possess but one string, the harmonics of which are played.

The spinets in this collection are particularly interesting from the fact that they are ornamented with delicate paintings done, on a gold ground; in many cases the entire workmanship leads to the conclusion that the instrument was made for some princely personage.

A charming little lute, dated 1596, has its entire body of tvory, while an archiute, with eleven melody strings, has the finger-board and neck iniald with mother-of-pearl. The fool fute is another odd specimen. The hollow ball of this instrument was filled with flour, which files over the unsuspecting player, when he attempts to use it.

It is impossible, in this little sketch, to give more than a hint of these treasures of the Musik-historische Museum. The musical curios are of all kinds, wood, brass and stringed, together with the various types of the plano in its evolution from the clavichord of the olden days to the plano of today. A gallery of pictures and other objects relating to music, forms not the least valuable portion of the collection.

A lady living in Hagerstown, Md., during the war, had a handsome Newfoundland dog whose wise head recognized that something very unusual was "up," and that all these crowds of men with ronsy bands and heavy tread, meant trouble. As Hagerstown was on the border, near Antietam, the two armies were continually driving each other back and forth, through it and around it, and the dag's soul was as constantly stirred within him. The family always knew when a squad of soldiers was passing the house by hearing "Ross" break into a perfect fury of barking, and the darkeys declared that "he 'ticular' spised de Yankees, an' dey sutin shush would shoot him one dese days." So whenever Ross lifted up his voice, the old cook would thy to the fentewhere the dog was, and stand, a stately turbaned figure, imploring with a voice trembling with fright: "Oh, please, Masta Yankee, scuse de dawe, he doon mean no harm, he ain't no Seesa."

Alpha Council No. 1, Empire Knights of Relief, was instituted at Y.M.I. Hall Friday evening by A. H. S. Perkins, D.S.C., and comprises about thirty charter members. The following officers were elected: James Booth, commander; August Dee, vice-commander; Hal Morse, assistant commander; Leon L. Upson, orator; T. H. McCamant, secretary; G. W. Smith, receiver and treasurer; L. J. Scheck, chaplain; H. F. Fleishman, guide: Dr. T. J. McCarty, medical examiner. The E.K.O.R. is a popular order in the East, and promises to increase in California, being similar to the Knights of Honor, Knights of Pythias and other orders.

be regarded as whelly deuchtin. Not only are the natural surroundings all that the most gifted artist could desire, ombodying as they do the grand upilt of mountains, wide plains, picturesque hills and valleys and the distant sweep of these, together with soft and ever-changing atmospheric effects, but there is here a gradually growing interest in art, and a better appreciation of the influence of true art upon the cultures and advancement of community. We have here our pupils may secure a regular course of instruction in all that pertains to a knowly edge of moder that pertains to a knowly on the course of the

that he cares for aught else. Nearly all of them are scenes in the neighborhood of his home in Siera Madre, Southern California.

"His pictures of the gigantic trees of California were surprising illustrations of the fact that immensity can be painted. But a man must be to the manor-born. He must have lived among those great scenes, must have known them from youth, yes, from childhood. They must have sunk deeply into his soul, and become a part of himself."

It should be a matter of local pride to us that Los Angeles has given to the world an artist who has met with so much favor elsewhere, and we are pleased to read the following which Miss Knowlton has so generously prophesied of his future. She writes:

"We shall hear soon of Mr. Borglum, who, to his good foreign training, adds a strong love of his own country, which, with his large-minded way of looking at art and artists, will bring him into prominence as one of the leaders of the younger painters of America."

Although Mr. Borglum returns East in the spring, and will open a studio in New York city, he will still continue to regard Southern California as his home. He will come back winters to paint pictures of the lovely effects found here which so charm Eastern people. He loves Southern California and chooses it for his home, but the East is so far his market, and he sold readily last summer every picture which he had with him, at good prices. His brush will be one of the best mediums of advertising the beauties of this section, for he will come here winters to prepare collections of pictures that he has no difficulty in disposing of in New York, Philadelphia and Boston. His studio at Sierra Madre he believes is in the midst of more beautiful surroundings than Millet's at Bairbazon, and that the valleys of Los Angeles and San Gabriel, and the grand range of the Sierra Madres, will some day, in the not distant future, be the haunts of our ablest painters. This new Italy of ours, like the sunny Italy of the Old World, should be the nursery of art, for all t beauty, and about vis.

In further art talks we shall note others of our leading artists, and the features which are the most promising for the gradual unfoldment and nurturing of art in our midst.

that she possessed a voice of rarest quality and range. Its cultivation was begun, ending in time with pupilage under Mme. Marchesi in Paris, and Lamperti, and finally under Abbe Lisst. Dramatic action was obtained through long study with Roger, the famous French tenor. Her operatic career began, She made her debut at great La Scala, Milan, as Lucia. She astonished the public, disarmed the critics and achieved a triumph. After Milan, then Berlin, where she was equally successfully appeared in "Carmeh," "Robert Diable," "The Magic Flute," "La Julve," "Norma," "Marriage of Figare," "Gustav III," "Don Juan," "Faust," "the Flying Dutchman," "Marriage of Figare," "Gustav III," "Don Juan," "Faust," "the Flying Dutchman," "Marriage of Figare," "Gustav III," "Don Juan," "Faust," "the Flying Dutchman," "Marriage of Figare," "Gustav III," "Don Juan," "Faust," "the Flying Dutchman," "Marriage of Figare," "Gustav III," "Don Juan," "Faust," "the Flying Dutchman," "Marriage of Figare," "Gustav III," "Don Juan," "Faust," "the Flying Dutchman," "Marriage of Figare," "Gustav III," "Don Juan," "Faust," "signon," "Il Trovatore," "Rigoletto," "La Tavizia," etc. She then took up the Wagner operas, in which her successes were eyen more brilliant. Her voice is a soprano of highest range, pure, rich, resenant, of rare lyric possessions, and her skill in execution almost without limit. She is a charming conversationalist, speaking in several languages, and to the honor of being an artist of rarest manifest gifts she adds those admirable qualities which dignify the character of a gentle and exemplary woman.

Mme. Thea Dorre is the mezzo soprano of the organization. Her greatest success has been "Carmen," and on innumerable occasions so far this season she has been pronounced equal in every respect to Calve. "Dealers are to blame for making California a laughing stock in this respect. It comes of the kind of goods they have been willing to buy and put into the market. After being here awhile people, especially ladies, have come to believe that feet in this country are larger than they are elsewhere; that their own feet have actually grown in size and got 'out of shape' since they came from the East—that it is something in the elimate.

"What nonsense! It is simply that the dealers, in order to obviate the necessity of carrying larger stocks, have got into the habit of buying only stock sizes and shapes, and the buyer, must of necessity, take shoes that are too large for him, or larger than they would need to be if they were only shaped right. It's a shame! And it's on this account that it has got to be a saying with manufacturers that 'anything will do for California'—any old out-of-date stock that buyers wouldn't look at East!

"But there is going to be a change. I was just talking with Mr. Tyler, of the Tyler Shoe Company, No. 137 South Spring street, who, by the way, have one of the neatest shoe stores I have seen anywhere in the West, and the nicest men's shoes, and he tells me that his house is going to inaugurate the very kind of a business I think ought to have been started here years ago. That is, they are going to make a speciality of real, fine, first-class dealer in New York or Boston or any other large Eastern city would show and shape, but also a sufficient variety in sizes to insure everybody a fit without compelling them to take larger shoes than they need.

"The Tyler Shoe Company has he cholocest, best-selected stock I have seen in Los Angeles; I mean, they've got the best stock right now."

Jeffreys Lewis has been so identified for several years with such thankless characters as Forget-me-Not and La Belle Russo that the general public seem to forget that only a few years ago she was one of the best leading ladies on the American stage. Tonight she will demonstrate that she can play a good, though erring worsen, as well as a bold and bad one. The play is "East Lynne," a dramatization of Mrs. Heary Woods's well-known novel. Those who were fortunate enough to witness Geraldine's parting from her child in "La Belle Russe" will concede that Miss Lewis has all the requisite emotional power for a successful and artistic portrayal of the unfortunate Lady Isahel. The play is familiar to theatergoers, and is always received with favor, especially by the ladies, and whenever properly interpreted never fails to attract large audiences. The reason for this is obvious. It is a pure and wholesome drama, and though it deals with a delicate subject, it serves to teach a great moral lesson. Many a woman has been asved from everlasting shame and disgrace by witnessing it. It is an object lesson that cannot fail to prove of lasting benefit to any woman prone to jealousy, it eaching them to beware of, designing knaves, masquerading under the guise of friendship. I would suggest better wages and seats in cabs. Medals are all wages and seats in cabs. Médals are all right as a mark, but even titles are no good when we are dead. Think of a man spending years in learning a trade, and then doubling the road between London and Dover, 160 miles, for 7 shillings—$1.75, or ninety miles for $1—just $3 less than an engineer gets for covering the same distance on a mountain road in the United States. The risk is about the same, for the English driver runs four times as fast as the mountaineer.

ON THE LOCOMOTIVE OF THE EN-GLISH EXPRESS.

Engine No. 17, designed by William Kirt-Engine No. 17, designed by William Kirr-ley, locomotive superintendent of the Lon-don, Chatham and Dover Rallway, was attached to the Paris train, and when we got a signal to go she started the eleven light carriages, all filled with people, as easily as a good horse starts a hansom. The fog that hung over the city in the early morning had all blown away and

The Englishman traveling in this native land makes little trouble for any one. He usually has its luggage aboard and his porter disnissed with a scowl and a threepence, while the foreigner with a smile and a hilling awaits his turn. All the Englishman asks is to be let alone, and surely asks is to be let alone, and surely tannot too much. They tell here, of a the sun shone brightly on the glistening steel. Our engine was nearly new, and I saw before we had gone a mile that she was a good, easy rider. She had not the exaggerated (eight foot) English wheels, and was all the better for it. She was smart, and had her train going so that the rear car passed out of the station-shed at fifteen miles an hour. The furnace door was ingeniously arranged, so that by pulling a lever the door parted in the middle. The firebox was not more than four feet long, but long enough to make plenty of steam, and with about 20 per cent. less coal than an American engine of the same size would consume. There was nothing to look out for but the signals, as the roadways in England are all walled in, and the driver dashed right away to the sea. The track is not straight, and I soon found it necessary to hang on to the cab as she swung round the corners.

Out through the ragged edge of London, over the Themes and down the rail our stoel steed whirled us at a rapid rate. The English driver does not run "with his hand on the throttle and his eye on the road," as we are wont to picture a locomotive engineer, for the throttle is at the top of the boilerhead, and must be sought out by the driver before he can shut off steam, no matter how great the emergency. It does not require a practised railroader to understand that if the driver had his hand on the lever he could shut off without taking his eye from the rail, and in less than a quarter of a second.

A NEAT STOP AND A HALTING START. Five miles out we stopped at a small station and pleked up four more carthe sun shone brightly on the glistening

No matter how long he reson duty the driver must stand up; as the stoker, who in descending a sak might get a moment's rest, and of sit, but must stand the whole way a weary feet. light cars. So perfectly were they adjusted and so smoothly did the quiet old seven shilling-a-day driver apply them that the train came to a dead stop with an little jolt as would attend the stopping of a baby carriage.

Already I had learned to like our locamotive, but when we got a signal to go, and the driver gave her steam the fifteen carriages refused to start. Here I witnessed, for the second time in my life, the working of the slowest, climsiest plece of machinery in use today in any civilized country—the "reversing wheel." I had seen it once before when the London and Northwestern's prize engine was leaving Chicago. When the locomotive fails to start her train, it is always necessary to reverse her to get what there is of slack between the cars. In this way the engine starts a car at a time, so that by the time the last car is started the locomotive has made a quarter of a turn or more and the front part of the train is in motion. With a quick-working reverse lever this is accomplished easily; but with a wheel that must be given from seven to eleven revolutions to reverse the machinery, the process is painfully slow, without the saving grace of being sure. As the wheel revolves the locomotive creeps forward, stealing the slack from car after car, so that by the time the machinery is in the forward motion the slack is gone, and you are just where you were before you began to reverse. There was a serious collision on the Great Northern not long ago; a double-head express train dashed into a goods train that was being shunted; and if the locomotives had "wheels" the wonder is that more people were not killed.

SEVENTY-FIVE MILES WITHOUT A STOP.

From Herne Hill, where we got the last four carriages, it is seventy-five miles to Dover, and we were to make the run without a stop. Just about the time our smart steed got them going she dashed into a tunnel half a mile long. The great drivers hammering the rails and the raitle of the carriages made a deafening roar, and to add to the torture the driver pulled the whistle. The English locomotive whistle is the shrillest, sharpest, most ear-splitting instrument of torture ever heard. It is about as musical as a Chinese fiddle accompanied by a lawn mower.

How bright the sun looked—for I had been in London four weeks—when we leaped out of the other end of the tunnel. Although it was now the middle of October, the sides of the cut were beautifully carpeted with green turf. The whole right-of-way was perfectly clean, and here and there were neat brick and stone stations between the up and down tracks.

As the smoke of London began to grow dim in the distance, a beautiful penperme perfectly clean, and here and there were neat brick and stone stations between the up and down tracks.

As the smoke of London began to grow dim in the distance, a beautiful panorams of fields and farms opened up before us. As far as the eye could reach, on either side, were rolling meadows and brown fields, dotted with thatch roofed stacks. If the speed slackened as we ascended a long "bank," these rural pictures claimed my attention and made me forget for the moment that we were at the front of the Paris express. But, when we had reached the summit, and the world began to slip beneath us till the keen air cut our faces, we were made to realize that we were not losing any time. Now we were rolling along the top of a high hill, from whose flat summit we looked down the chimney pots in the village houses; and now dashing into a deep cut, where flocks of frightened quali rose up and beat the bank, or, caught by the eddying wind, were dashed against the sides of the flying train, as a man standing near the track and grown dizzy throws bimself beneath the wheels.

A FLEETING GLIMPSE OF THE LAND OF DICKENS. OF DICKENS.

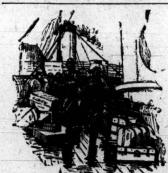

A sharp curve throws our train out on the brow of a gentle hill. Below, through a green valley, winds a lazy-looking river—the Medway. This is the old town of Rochester, the land of Dickens, and beyond the river stands the old Norman castle. And this is what Mr. Jingle said when he saw if:

he saw it:
"A fine old place a glorious pile-"A fine old place—a glorious pile—frowning walls—tottering arches—dark nooks—crumbling stair cases—old cathedrai too—earthy smell—pilgrim's feet wore away the old steps—little Saxon doors—confessionals, like money-takers' boxes at theaters—queer customers, those monks—popes, and lord treasurers, and all sorts of old fellows with great red faces and broken noses turning up every way—buff jerkins too—match-locks—Sarcophagus—fine place—old legends—strange stories." The red vines that cking to the shoulders of this rare old ruin, grow warmly in the autumn sun. Only a flash, and we turned another corner, and the old castle is lost in the dreamy blond brick houses of Rochester. Now and then, as the train whirls through the city, the towering spires of the cathedral are seen.

A SMOOTH, SWIFT DASH DOWN THE

A SMOOTH, SWIFT DASH DOWN THE DOVER.

Away, away, the engine flies and the dull town is left for the sunny fields. We are now entering the great hop fields of Kent, one of the fairest counties in all England, I am told. Ours is not the only locomotive abroad, for almost every mo-ment we can seen another train flying across the country, always crossing either above or below our track. Out in the fields are other engines, great awkward machines pulling plows, and sometimes trains of wagons through village streets.

machines pulling plows, and sometimes trains of wagons through village streets. At the end of a long curve, around which we swing at a mile a minute, rise the great spires of the cathedral of Canterbury.

Here, too, are clinging vines and crumbling walls—old legends and strange stories. Here are stone steps worn away by pilgrims' knees—the steps that lead from the musty crypt to Becket's shrine. Here sleep the murdered bishop and the king.

Here sleep the murdered bishop and the king.

But there is no time to dream, for we are now whirling away toward the water's edge. At last the driver shuts off steam, the stoker washes the deck with a water hose connected with the injector pipe, and remarks that his work is done. His labors, like his salary, is light, for, atthough we have been on the road nearly two hours he has not burned a half ton of coal. The trains, of course, are light and that makes light work for the enginemen. It is all down bill now, and we fairly fall through the tunnels and deep cuts till all at once the "silver streak," as they call it here, is zeen, and this is the end of the first heat.

ABOARD THE VICTORIA.

ABOARD THE VICTORIA.

Many things bear the name of "the widow of Windsor," and I was not surprised to find the Victoria rocking restlersly by the dock at Dover.

It is surprising to an American to see how quickly fourteen English carriages can be emptied. I should say that in two minutes from the time our train stopped, we were all aboard. In eight minutes the bagage was transferred from the train to the boat, and in ten minutes we were leaving the dock.

The channel has not the reputation of being particularly pacific, and this was one of her busy days. In ten minutes after the whistle sounded, the Victoria was capering out toward the coast of France, just as an untamed bronco capers with a cowboy across a corral. To the disgrace of the London, Chatham and Dover Railway Company, she is a side-wheeler. Except the reversing wheel and the seatless cab of the 117, this is the only disgraceful thing I found on the Dover route.

NOBLEMEN AND COMMONER IN AN

NOBLEMEN AND COMMONER IN AN EQUALITY OF DRESS.

EQUALITY OF DRESS.

There are in the Victoria a number of state rooms, a splendid lounging saloon, a ladies' cabin, a "public house." Better than all these things, there are the ever-ready stowards, who watch the women, and just the moment when life loses its glitter and the unbappy tourist ceases to care, come quietly, wearing the while a look of deepest sympathy, leave a small regretting basin by her chair and move away.

the humbler passengers, and we are apt to see her gradually relinquish her dignity, dejeuner and things, and sag down into her chair like a sack of hops in the front end of a dray.

I made a short study of a lord going over. He was not what you would call distinguished looking in his large soft hat and rain coat, but he looked respectable at least. We had not gone very far when he began to turn his head from side to side as if he had lost something. Then he would close his eye for a spell and try to think. He was the homeliest man I have seen in Europe, and he was constantly doing "stunts" with his good eye in order to keep the glass in the other. I don't know whether he died or not, for a sort of malarial feeling came oyer me and I lost interest in everything except the French coast.

In spite of the rough sea we made the run from Dover to Calais, twenty-five miles in a few minutes over an hour.

IN FRANCE.

"Chemint de Fer du Nord" is the first French sign seen by the voyager from England. It is the name of the railway—or "Road of Iron" as the French put it, over which we are to pass to Paris.

The captain of the "Victoria" had given me a letter which contained a pass—a "Permis de Monter sur les Machines" and this pass went on to say that I would be "permitted to circulate or promenade on the machine drawing the quick express during one voyage between Calais and Paris." This little surprise had been arranged for me through the kindness of Mr. Morgan, secretary of the London, Chaham and Dover, an able manager and an agreeable gentlemsn.

At Calais the government inspectors toy with the hand-baggage, spill the smelling enginemen and me, a feeling of estrangement that was almost melancholy.

I missed the sleepy panting of the airpump and the click of the latch on the reverse lever. There was no bell to relieve the monotony of the rasping, phthisicy whistle. I wondered if we could ever understand each other—if she would respond to my touch, for the driver talked to her in a strange tongue.

Aye, and these threads of steel stretch away through a foreign land; but it's all God's world. The same sun lights up the fields with that matchiess brilliancy so missed by Americans on the English isle. The trains here, as in Great Britain, are light and it requires only a few moments to get them going. The country is rough, or rather rolling, and there are plenty of curves, heavy hills and deep cuts, whose scooping sides are paved with the native stone, cut smooth as the wills of a house. The track is good and the riding easy. The country grows more beautiful as the town of Calais is left further and further behind; but all so strangely new. The fields are small and well-cutivated; and here and there on the terraced downs women trudge by the side of ox teams that are hauling heavy harrows by their heads, having sticks lashed to their horns.

The line runs along the coast, and the happy peasants tolling in fields that tip gently to the west, watch the sunset in the see. Some of the little vales that face the water are strangely beautiful, lit by the mellow light of the dying day. And now my new strange horse of fron quickens pace, for we are descending a long hill, and the fields wheel and whirl by so rapidly that I can scarcely count the horses in the long tandems that draw the high-wheeled carts.

The engine men wore no gloves and salts and face powder and mix things up generally. Your heavy luggage has been "passed through" to Paris and gives you no trouble.

Those who had recovered sufficiently from the uneasiness of the channel went into the buffet and had breakfast. In London it is always morning till you have dined at night, and in France all that you eat, no matter how often, is breakfast until dinner, which is seldom before 7 p.m. CALCULATING IN THE "MACHINE OF THE PARIS QUICK EXPRESS." THE PARIS QUICK EXPRESS."

Sliding back into my engine clothes, I went forward to where the lecomotive stood steaming and sizzling, ready to be off.

Just as I reached her the driver began to whiri the reversing-wheel, for he had heard the signal bell, and the long train moved away. I showed my pass. The driver smiled and waved me out of the fireman's way. The cab was the same wretched, comfortless cavity that I had seen on the "Dover" only not so clean. The tank, or tender, where the coal is carried, was filled with slack and dust. As fast as he shoveled into the heap where the slack was dry, the fireman turned the hose on it until it was a puddle of mush, and to my surprise he shoveled this slop into the firebox and kept the locomotive howing hot. It would be impossible, of course, to fire an American express locomotive with such fuel, for there the engines are worked so much harder to draw the heavy trains. When we had whipped around a few curves I saw that the best place for me was behind the driver, and I stepped over to his side.

Oh, the grasses are growing all over the hills, and the fences are blooming with signs of new pills to take by the peck for malarial ills which the sweet gentle spring time may bring us. Way up in the mountains the beautiful snow seems callding to me, but I guess I won't go; I can get the cold shoulder enough here below, where the frost never ventures to sting us.

The flowers are springing to view in a flood, and even our Governor's going to Budd, though it looked for awhile like his name would be mud, and his season of blooming was over; Budd they've planted him now in the Governor's chair, and they'll 'irrigate him with remarkable care, if he don't bring a crop of appointments I'll swear our godfather's name isn't Grover.

One man in our city's been making a stir, he tried to take oath but the range was too "fur," so the hold-over Sheriff hung on like a Burr, in-Cline-ed for to make opposition, to see if a telephone cussing will do. I think when a man has to turn the air blue, in the seventeen counties his oath passes through, he ought to lay off and "go fishin."

But the dear county daddies who roost on the hill, considered the matter with consummate skill, and deeded that Burr was the one who should fill the place if the people are ruling. So they passed resolutions which wisely inferred, that the voice of the people had ought to be heard; so between you and me now our Sheriff's a Burr(ed), without any joking or fooling.

Now Johnny, and Jenny, and Jacob and Jane, go out every Sundsy to green "Lover's Lane," and stroll with one eye on the lookout for rain, and the other one loving and tender, turned on the companion so trusting and dear, but each eye gets a twist till it nudges an ear, to get out of the way so the coast may be clear, should a storm come along on a bender.

Yes, this is the spring, for I guess I can see, though the almance says that it oughten't to be, and

If the cabs had spats, running a locomotive would be much easier in Europe than in America. The ways are all walled or fenced in, and there is no necessity for the constant straining of the eyes and nerves from which American drivers suffer so much.

WOMEN SWITCH-TENDERS.

The first stop is at Amiens, eight miles out. There I saw what I had never seen before—women working the switches in a signal tower. There were two of them, and they appeared to have the station quite to themselves I made no doubt that they appeared to have the station quite to themselves I made no doubt that they appeared to have the station quite to themselves I made no doubt that they find their work very agreeable and interesting; that they are faithful, that their homes are nappy, and that they consider themselves very superior and refuse to exchange calls with their sister, the "bullwhacker over in the field.

At Amiens we met night on her way to the west, and I gave up the engine for the more comfortable carriage. This compartment was, very like the one assigned our party on the Chaham and Dover, except that it was a trifie wider and done in tan instead of blue.

Here as in England the stations are ample with all the tracks under cover. The train stops but five minutes, but the European carriages soon discharge their passenthe first class into the Buffet, the second as a rule int

"Better to wait until sure I need it; the ost of this excursion is still before us."
The lumbering butte came to a stop, ith his huge head turned, and surveyed is approaching skaters. Had they atmosted to fiee or had they come to all, probably he would have started after iem. As it was he swung half way und, so that his side was exposed. He fored a fine target for Sterry's weapon, at the young man still refrained from sing it.

"It isn't well to go too near him," remarked Fred Whitney, seizing the arm of his sister and drawing her toward the shore on the left.

"I don't mean to," replied the bright-witted girl, "but if we turn away from him too soon, he will be able to head usoff; he mustn't suspect what we intend to do."

"Ther's sense in that," remarked Sterry, "but don't wait too long."
The three were skating close together, with their eyes on the big creature, who was watching them sharply.
"Now!" called Fred in a low, quick volce.

He had not loosened his grasp of his rister's arm, so that, when he made the turn, she was forced to follow him. The moment was well chosen and the three swung to one side, ar if all were controlled by the single impulse.

agry growl be began moving toward the ughing party. The tings of anxiety which Fred Whittey felt lasted but a moment. He saw at they could skate faster than the bear und travel; and had it been otherwise, o cause for fear would have existed, for, ith the power to turn like a flash, it build have been the easiest thing in the orid to elude the most desperate efforts the animal to selve them. They expected pursuit, and it looked for minute as if they were not to be dispointed. The animal headed in their discion with no inconsiderable speed, but ith more intelligence than his kind genally displayed, he abruptly stopped, and aside and disappeared in the wood, ifore it could be said the race had really gun.

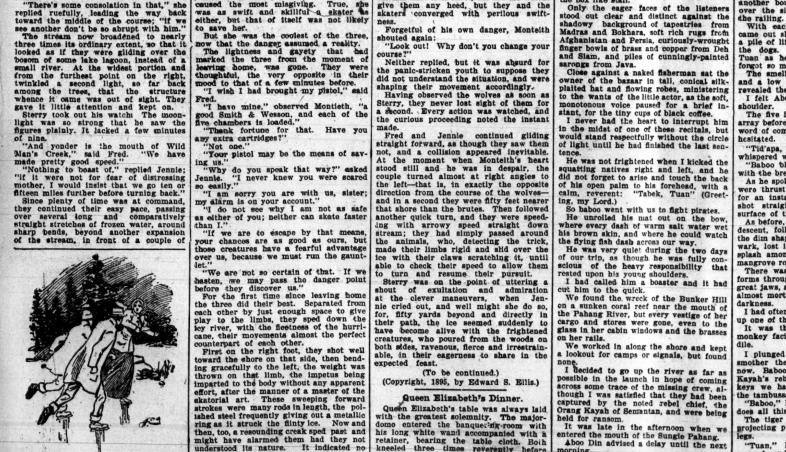

that he's the only bear in this part of Maine."

"There's some consolation in that," she replied ruefully, leading the way back toward the middle of the course; "if we see another don't be so abrupt with him."

The stream now broadend to nearly three times its ordinary extent, so that it looked as if they were gliding over the bosom of some lake lagoon, instead of a small river. At the widest portion and from the furthest point on the right, twinkled a second light, so far back among the trees, that the structure whence it came was out of sight. They gave it little attention and kept on.

Sterry took out his watch. The moonlight was so strong that he saw the figures plainly. It lacked a few minutes of nine.

"And vonder is the mouth of Wild."

Sterry uttered a shout of exultation at the clever maneuver.

natural openings, and finally, while it lacked considerable of 10 o'clock, they rounded to in front of a mass of gray towering rocks, on the right bank of the stream, and skating close into shore, sat down on a boulder, which obtruded several feet above the ice.

They were at the extremity of their excursion. These collective rocks bore, the name of Wolf Glen, the legend being that at some time in the past a horde of wolves made their headquarters there, and when the winters were unusually severa, held the surrounding country in what might be called a reign of terror. They had not yet wholly disappeared, but little fear was felt of them.

The friends could not be called tired, though, after skating fifteen miles, the rest on the stone was quite grateful.

They sat for half an hour chatting, laughing and as merry as when they started from home. The sky was still unclouded, but the moon had passed beyond the zenith. A wall of shadow was thrown out from one of the banks, except for occasional short distances, where the course of the stream was directly toward or from the orb.

When Sterry again glanced at his watch it was a few minutes past 10. They had rested longer than any one had suspected.

"Mother won't look for as before midmint."

rested longer then any one had sus-pected.
"Mother won't look for us before mid-night," remarked Fred, "and we can ea-sity make it in that time."
"She was so enxious," said the sister, who despite her light-heartedness was more thoughtful than her brother, "that I would like to please her by getting back sooner than she expects."

accustomed to that?" asked Monteith, less accustomed to the Maine woods than his companions.

"It is the cry of a wolf," replied Fred.
"I have heard it many times when hunting alone or with father."
"It isn't the most cheerful voice of the night," commented the young Bostonian, who as yet never dreamed of connecting it with any peril to themselves.

And then he sang:
"Yes, the war-whoop of the Indian may produce a pleasant thrill.
When mellowed by the distance that one feels increasing still;
And the shrilling of the whistle from the engine's brazen snout,
May have minor tones of music, though I never found it out."
The verse was hardly finished when the how! was repeated.
"It is hard to tell from what point it comes," observed Fred, "but I think it is on the right shore as we go back."
"Do you imagine it is far from the river?" inquired Monteith.
"I think not, but I may be mistaken."
"I am quite sure Fred is right," said his sister, "and, more than that, that particular wolf isn't a great way off. I wonder, whether he has scented our trail?"

Before any comment could be made upon this femark, a second, third, fourth and bent forward to see whither they were go-

"There they are!"
It was she who uttered the exclamation which sent a thrill through both. They saked for no explanation, for none was needed, and an instant later they were at her side, she slightly slackening her pace. The sight, while alarming, was not all that Fred and Monteith anticipated.

Three or four gaunt animals were trotting along the ice near the left shore, but no others were visible.

"Keep in the middle while I take a turn that way," said Monteith, sheering in the direction named.

"Keep in the muone that way," said Monteith, sheering in the direction named.

Brother and sister did not read the meaning of this course, nor could they detect its wisdom; but they obeyed without question.

Young Sterry hoped by making what might look like an attack upon the famishing pests, to scare them off for a few minutes, during which the three, and especially Jennie could reach a point below them. With the brutes thus thrown in the rear, it might be said the danger would be virtually over.

Now, as every one knows, the wolf is a sneak, and generally will run from a child if it presents a bold front; but it becomes exceedingly dangerous, when pressed by hunger.

exceedingly dangerous, when pressed by hunger.

Montieth Sterry's reception was alto-gether different from what he anticipated. When the half dozen wolves saw him speeding toward them, they stopped their trotting, and, like the beast, looked around, fully half a dozen additional howis rang through the forest arches. They came from the left shore, and apparently were shout as far off as the cry first heard."

"They are answers," said Fred, in a low voice, in which his companions detected a slight tremor.

It was at this moment that the first feer thrilled all three. The cries might mean nothing, but more-likely they meant a good deal. The wolf is one of the fiercest of American wild animals where suffering from hunger, though a coward at other times, and a horde of them are capable of attacking the most formidable denize of the woods.

The fact that they were between the friends and home, and at no great distance from the course, they must follow to reach there, was cause for fear. It was almost certain that in some way the lecen-scented creatures had learned there was game afoot that night for them, and they were signaling to each other to gather for the feast.

Fred and Montath were not specially frightened on their own account, for, if the worst should come, they could take to the trees and wait for help. They might make a sturdy fight, and, perhaps, with enything like a show, could get away from them without taking to such a refuge.

But it was the presence of Jennie that caused the most misgiving. True, she was as swift and skillfur a skater as either, but that of itself was not likely to save her.

The lightness and gayety that had marked the three from the moment of leewing home, was gone. They were thoughtful, the very opposite in their mood to that of a few minutes before.

"I wish I had brought my pistol," said Fred.

"I have mine," observed Montieth, "a good Smith & Wesson, and each of the those creatures have a fearful advantage over us, because we must run the gaunt-det."

"We are not so certain of that. If we hasten, we may pass the danger point before they discover us."

For the first time since leaving home the three did their best. Separated from each other by just enough space to give play to the limbs, they sped down the loy river, with the fleetness of the hurricame, their movements almost the perfect counterpart of each other.

First on the right foot, they shot well toward the shore on that side, then bending gracefully to the left, the weight was thrown on that limb, the impetus being imparted to the body without any apparent effort, after the manner of a master of the skatorial art. These sweeping forward strokes were many rods in length, the polished steel frequently giving out a metallic ring as it struck the fiinty ice. Now and then, too, a resounding creak sped past and might have alarmed them had they not understood its nature. It indicated no weakness of the frozen surface, but was caused by the settling of the crystal floor as the water flowed beneath.

For a few minutes these were the only noises that broke the impressive stillness. The three had begun to hope that the ominous sounds would be heard no more and that the wolves were too far from the river to detect them until beyond reach. If they could once place themselves below the animais they need not fear, for they could readily distance them, Should the speed of the pursuers become dangerous, a sharp turn or change in the course would throw them off and give the fugitives an advantage that would last for a long time. But they dreaded the appearance of a whole pack of the ravenous brutes in front, thus shutting off their line of flight homeward. True, in that case, they could turn about and flee up stream, but the risk of encountering others attracted by the cries would be great, and perhaps leave their only recourse to take to the woods.

The thoughts of each turned to the nearest hunter's cabin, although it was several showed.

In truth, she was slightly in advance, as they began following the curve of the river, her head, like each of the others, standing, as if they had decided to stay where they were until the stranger came up and introduced himself.

"Confound them! why don't they take to the woods!" he muttered. He had removed the mitten from his right hand, which grasped his revolver; "that isn't according to Hoyle."

He shied a little to the right, with a view of preventing a collision with the creatures, and the moment he was close enough, let fly with one chamber at the nearest.

Accidentally he nipped the wolf, which emitted a yelping bark, leaped several feet in the air, and then limped into the woods, as though he had learned enough of the interesting stranger.

as though he had learned enough of the interesting stranger.

That is just what the youth had hoped to do, and the success of his scheme would have been perfect had the others imitated their wounded companion, but they did the opposite.

Without paying any attention to Sterry, they broke into a gallop toward the middle of the river, their course such as to place them either in advance of Fred and Jennie Whitney or to bring them together.

Greatly alarmed for them, Monteith did Greatly alarmed for them, Monteith did an unnecessary thing by shouting (for the couple could not fail to see their danger.) Neither shot took effect, nor did the wolves give them any heed, but they and the skaters converged with perilous swiftness.

Forgetful of his own danger, Monteith shouted again:
"Look out! Why don't you change your course?"
Neither replied, but it was absurd for the national carrieden youth to suppose they Queen Elizabeth's Dinner.

Queen Elizabeth's Dinner.

Queen Elizabeth's table was always laid with the greatest solemnity. The majordomo entered the banquering room with his long white wand accompanied with a retainer, bearing the table cloth. Both kneeled three times reverently before spreading the cloth, after which they sgain kneeled and retired. In like manner the major-domo led in the man who carried the salt cellar, the plates, and the bread, when the performance of kneeling was again enacted. Two ladies of title now entered, one a matron, the other unmarried. These prostrated themselves and the young lady rubbed the plates carefully with sal', and bread. After that came the yeoman of the guard or "beefeaters," each carrying a silver dish. These were usually four and twenty to a course. A gentleman received each dish, and after it was placed by him upon the table, a lady took out a small portion and gave it to the man who had carried it so that he might test whether it contained poison. During all of these observances the ceremonles of kneeling were continued, just as if the queen were present, and the trumpeters biew their horns and the kettle drums, sounded loudly. When at last the Queen entered her private room leading out of the banqueting-hall each dish was carried to her first by an unmarried lady, and then placed on the table. Then her majesty enterel and made her selection. The most peculiar and solemn etiquette was observed throughout the entire meal. The first course usually consisted of wheaten firmmery, broth, or gruel; the recond fish, embracing sampreys, sturgeon, stock fish, poor John, and porpoise; the third, quaking puddings; the fourth, veal, beef, multon, capons, marrow pasties, wild fowl, and game; and the fifth, sweets, curiards, jellies, warden ples, syllabuts, suckets, marchpanes, followed by cheese and tansy cakes. The drinks were ale, beer, wine, suck, and varieties of methegin, conoccted out of herbs and redolent of sweet smelling country perfumes. Queen Elizabeth's Dinner.

BABOO'S PIRATES.

By Rounseville Wildman, Late U. S. Consul at Singapore.

[from a Special Contributor.]

There was a scuffie in the outer office, and a thin piping voice was calling down all the curses of the Koran on the heads of my great top-heavy Hindoo guards. "Sons of dogs," I heard in the most withering contempt. "I will see the Tuan Consul. Know he is my father, pigs!"

A tall-Sikh with his great red turban awry, and his brown Kaki uniform torn and solled, pushed through 'the bamboo chicks and into my presence.

He was dragging a little bit of naked humanity by the folds of its faded cotton sarons.

The powerful soldier was hot and flushed and a little stream of blood trickling from his finger tips showed where they had come in contact with his captive's teeth. It was as though an elephant had been werried by a parlah cur. "Your Excellency," he said, salaaming and gasping for breath.

"It is Baboo, the Hairman Anak—" Baboo wrenched from the guard's grasp and glided up to my desk. The back of his open paim went to his forehead and his big brown eyes looked appealingly up into mine.

"What is it, Tiger-child?" I asked, be-mine.

"What is it, Tiger-child?" I asked, bestowing on him the title the Malays of Kampang Glam had given him as a perpetual reminder of his famous adventure.

Rampus perpetual reminder of his lattice.

Dimples came into either tear-stained cheek. He smoothed out the rents in his small sarong without deigning to notice his late captor, said in a soft sing-song voice:

"Tuan Consul, Baboo want to go with the Heaven Born to Pahang. Baboo six years old—can fight pirates like Aboo Din, the father. May Mohamet make Tuan as odorous as musk!"

"You are a boaster before Allah, Baboo," I said smiling.
Baboo dropped his head in perfectly simulated contrition.

"I have thought much, Tuan."

News had come to me that an American merchant ship had been wrecked near the mount of the Pahang River and that the Malays, who were at the time in revolt, against the English resident, had taken possession of its cargo of petroleum and made prisoners of the crew.

I had asked the colonial Governor for a guard of five Sikhs and a launch, that I might steam up the coast, and investigate the elleged outrage before appealing officially to the British government.

Of course Baboo went, much to the disgust of Aboo Din, the Syce.

I never was able to refuse the little fellow anything and I knew if I left him behind he would be revenged by running away.

I had vowed sgain and again that Baboo should stay loat the next time he induiged in his periodical vanishing acts, but each time when night came Aboo Din, the Syce, and Fatima, the mother, crept pathetically along the veranda to where I was smoking and steeling my heart against the little rascal, I would snatch up my cork helmet and spring into my cart which Aboo Din had kept waiting inside the stables for the moment when I would relent.

Since Baboo had become a hero and earned the appellation of the Hariman Anak, his vanity directed his footsteps toward Kampong Glam, the Malay quarter of Singapore. Here he was generally to be found, seated on a richly-hued Indian rus, with his feet drawn up under him, amid a circle of admirng sinopkeepers, Syces, Kebuns and fishermen, narrating for the hundredt time how he had been caught by a tiger, carried through the jungle on its back until he came to a great banyan tree, into which he had crawled while the tiger slept, how a Sladang came out of the lagoon and killed the eager faces of the listeners stood ou

I decided to go up the river as far as possible in the launch in hope of coming across some trace of the missing crew, although I was satisfied that they had been captured by the noted rebel chief, the Orang Kayah of Semantan, and were being held for ransom.

It was late in the afternoon when we mered the mouth of the Sungle Pahang.

Aboo Din advised a delay until the next entered the mouth of the Sungie Pahang.

Aboo Din advised a delay until the next morning.

"The Oreng Kayah's Malays are pirates, Tuan," he said with a sinister shrug of his bare shoulders; "he has many men and swift praus; the Dutch at Rio have sold them guns and they have krisses—they are cowards in the day."

I smiled at the Syce's fears,

I knew that the days of piracy in the Straits of Malacca, rose for an occasional outbreak of high-sea petty larceny, on a Chinese lumber or a native trader's tong-kang, were past, and I did not believe that the rebels would have the hardihood to attack, day or night, a boat, however unprotected, bearing the American flag.

For an hour or more we ran along between the mangrove bound shores, up a swiftly muddy current.

The great tangled roots of these trees stood up out of the water like a fretwork of lace, and the interwoven branches above our heads shut out the glassy glare of the sun. We pushed on until the dim twilight faded out and only a phosphorescent glow on the water remained to reveal the snags that marked our course.

The launch was anchored for the night close under the bank where the maze of mangroves were beginning to give place to the solid ground and the jungle.

Myriads of firefiles settled down on us and hung from the low limbs of the overhanging trees, relieving the hot murky darkness with their thousands of throbbing lamps.

From time to time a croccodile splashed lamps.

From time to time a crocodile splashed in the water as he slid heavily down the clayey bank at the bow.

In the trees and rubber vines all about us, a colony of long-armed wah wah monkeys whisted and chatted, and further away the sharp, rasping note of a cicada kept up a continuous protest at our invasion.

At intervals the long, quivering yell of a tiger frightened the garrulous monkeys into silence and made us peer apprehensively toward the impenetrable blackness of the jungla.

Aboo Din came to me as I was arranging my meaquito curtains for the night.

He was casting quick, timid glances over his shoulder as he talked.

"Tuan, I no like this place. Too close bank. Ten boat-lengths down stream better. Baboo swear by Allah he see faces behind trees—once, twice—Baboo good eyes."

I shook off the uncanny feeling that the place was beginning to cast over me, and turned fiercely on the faithful Aboo Din.

He slunk away with a low salaam, muttering something about the Heaven Born being all-wise, and later I saw him in deep converse with his first-born under a palm-thatched cadanj on the bow.

I was half inclined to take Aboo Din's advice and drop down the stream. Then it occurred to me that I might better face an imaginary foe than the whirlpool and sunken snags of the Pahang.

I posted sentinels fore and aft and lay down and closed my eyes to the legion of fireflies that made the night luminous, and my ears to the—low musical chant that arose fiftuily from among my Malay servants on the stern.

The Sikhs were big, massive fellows, fully six feet tail with towering red turbans that accentuated their height fully a foot.

They were regular artillerymen from foot.

They were regular artillerymen from Fort Canning, and had seen service all over India.

They had not been in Singapore long enough to become acquainted with the Maslay language or character, but they knew their duty and trusted to their military training rather than to my Malay's superior knowledge, for our safety during the night.

I feil saleep at last, lulled by the tenderly-crooned promises of the Koran and the drowsy, intermittent prattle of the monkeys among the varnished leaves, above. The night was intensely hot, not a breath of air could stir within our living cavern, and the cooling moisture, which always comes with nightfall on the equator, was lapped up by the thirsty fronds above our heads, so that I had not slept many hours before I awake, diipping with perspiration, and faint.

There was an impression in my mind that I had been awakened by the failing of glass.

The Sikh saluted silently as I stepped out on the deck.

It lacked some hours of daylight, and there was nothing to do but go back to my bed, owing never again to camp for the night along the eteaming shores of a jungle-covered stream.

I slept but indifferently—I missed the cooling swish of the punkah, and all through my dreams the crackle and breaking of glass seemed to mingle with the insistent buzs of the tiger-gnats.

Baboo's diminutive form kept filtting between me and the firefles.

The first half lights of morning were struggling down through the green canopy above, when I was brought to my feet by the discharge of a Winchester and a long, shrill cry of fright and pain.

Before I could disentangle myself from the meshes of the mosquito net, I could see daily a dozen naked forms—dropy lightly onto the deck from the obscurity of the bank, followed in each case by a long, piercing scream of pain.

I snatched up my revolver and rushed out onto the deck in my bare feet.

Some one grasped me by the shoulders and shouted:

"Jaga batk, baik, Tuan! (Be careful, Tuan,) pirates!"

I recognized Aboo Din's voice, and I checked myself ju

Shadowy forms were leaping, one atter smother, from the branches above onto the deck. I slowly cocked my revolver, doubting my senses, for each time one of the invaders reached the deck he sprace into the air with the long, thrilling cry of pain that had awakened me, and with another bound was on the bulwarks and over the side of the launch, clinging to the railing.

With each cry Baboo's mocking voice came out shrill and exultant from behind a pile of life preservers: "O Allah, judge the dogs. They would kris the great Tuan as he slept—the pariahs—but they forgot so mean a thing as Baboo'?"

The smell of warm blood filled the air and a low snarl among the rubber vines revealed the presence of a tiger.

I felt Aboo Din's hand tremble on my shoulder.

The five Sikhs were drawn up in battle array before the cabin door waiting for the word of command. I glanced at them and hesitated.

"Tid'apa, Tuan," (never mind) Aboo Din whispered with a proud ring in his voice." "Baboo how Orang Kayah's men away with the breath of his mouth."

As he spoke the brannhes above the bow were thrust aside and a dark form hung for an instant as though in doubt, then shot straight down on the corrugated surface of the deck.

As before, a shriek of agony heraided the descent, followed by Baboo's laugh, then the dim shape sprang wildly upon the bulwark, lost its hold and went over with a splash among the snake-like labyrinto of mangroye roots.

There was the rushing of many heavy forms through the red mud, a snapping of great jaws, and there was no mistaking the almost mortal cry that arose from out the darknass. darkness.

I had often heard it when paddling softly up one of the wild Malayan rivers.

It was the death cry of a wah wah monkey facing the cruel jaws of a crocomonkey facing the cruel jaws of a crocodile.

I plunged my fingers into my ears to smother the sound. I understood it all now. Baboo's pirates, the dreaded Orang Kayah's rebels, were the troop of monkeys we had heard the night before in the tambussa trees.

"Baboo," I shouted, "come here! What

The tiger child glided from behind the

The snarl of the tiger was growing more insistant and near.

I gave the order and the boat backed out into mid-stream.

As the sun was reducing the gloom of the sylvan tunnel to a translucent twilight we floated down the swift current toward the ocean.

I had given up all hope of finding the shipwrecked men, and decided to ask the government to send a gunboat to demand their release.

As the bow of the launch passed the wreck of the Bunker Hill and responded to the long, even swell of the Pacific, Baboo beckoned sheepishly to Aboo Din and together they swept all trace of his adventure in the green waters.

Among the souvenirs of my sojourn in Golden Chersonese is a bit of amber-colored glass bearing the world-renowned name of a London brewer. There is a dark stain on one side of it that came from the hairy foot of one of Baboo's "pirates."

LITTLE MR. THIMBLEFINGER

AND HIS QUEER COUNTRY—THE CHILDREM'S SECOND VISIT.

By Joel Chandler Harris.

By Joel Chandler Harris.

(SYNOPSIS: When Buster John, Sweetest Susan and Drusilla returned home, after the first visit to Mr. Thimblefinger's queer country, they told some of the wonderful things they had seen and heard! When the neighbors got hold of kt, some of the old ladies put their heads together and said it was a sign that they were too smart to stay in this world.

Buster John, who had ideas of his own, ignored all this, and bright and early one morning he put an apple in the spring. No socner had the apple begun to float and bob about in the water than Drusilla and Sweetest Sussan came running to zee what would happen. Suddenly, before

Buster John and Sweetest Susan turned to look, and there upon the stump beside them stood Mr. Thimblefinger, his hat in his hand, bowing and smiling as politely as you please.

"I hope you are well," he said. "I've come to invite you all back to my queer country. Mrs. Meadows and Mr. Rabbit have a fine set of new stories they are waiting to tell as soon as we all return."

The children looked at each other, moded their heads, and at hineteen minutes and twenty seconds after nine, the whole party walked through the spring gates There was Tickle-My-Toes, Chickenney Crany Crow, Mr. Rabbit and Mrs. Meadows, waiting to welcome them.

anybody could say a word, Drusilla screamed, rolled off the stump, and sprang to her feet, crying: "Dar he is! Look at 'im!"

Buster John and Sweetest Susan turned to look, and there upon the stump beside them stood Mr. Thimblefinger, his hat in his hand, bowing and smiling as politicly as you please.

"I hope you are well," he said. "I've come to invite you all back to my queer country. Mrs. Meadows and Mr. Rabbit have a fine bet of new stories they are waiting to tell as soon as we all return."

The children looked at each other, modded their heads, and at nineteen minutes and twenty seconds after nine, the whole party walked through the spring gates. There was Tickle-My-Toes, Chickeney Crany Crow, Mr. Rabbit and Mrs. Meadows, waiting to welcome them.

"Now, my dears," said Mrs. Meadows, "we must do something to amuse you right away, Tell us what it shall be."

Sweetest Susan turned to look at it levery Saturday in the year. If I hapened to be too sick to eat it I could sit it every Saturday in the year. If I hapened to be too sick too eat it I could sit it every Saturday in the year. If I hapened to be too sick too eat it I could sit it every Saturday in the year. If I hapened to be too sick too have one like it every Saturday in the year. If I hapened to be too sick too set "Now, my dears," said Mrs. Meadows,
"we must do something to amuse you right away. Tell us what it shall be."
Sweetest Susan said she wanted to know what stories Mr. Thimblefinger had told while they were away, and everybody listened while Mrs. Meadows repeated the beautiful fairy tales of "The Magic Ring" and "The Cow with the Golden Horns.") benn fast asleep when she did it. But the place for a moral, as I've been told, is right at the end of the story, and not at the beginning."

"Can't you tell us a story with a moral?" suggested Mr. Meadows.

"I can," replied Mr. Rabbit. "I can, for a fact, and the piece of cake you mentioned puts me in mind of it."

Mr. Rabbit closed his eyes and rubbed his nose, and then began:

"Once upon a time, when Brother Fox and myself were living on pretty good terms with each other, we received an invitation to attend a barbecue that Brother Wolf was going to give on the following Saturday. The next day we received an invitation to a barbecue that Brother
Wolf was going to give on the following Saturday. The next day we received an invitation to a barbecue that Brother Bear was going to give on the same Saturday.

"I made up my mind at once to go to Brother Bear's barbecue, because I knew he would have fresh roasting ears. I asked Brother Fox whether he was going to Brother Bear's barbecue or to Brother Wolf's, but he shook his head. He said he hadn't made up his mind. I just asked him out of idle curiosity, for I didn't care whether he went or whether he stayed.

"I went about my work as usual. Cold weather was coming on and I wanted to get my crops in before the big freeze came. But I noticed that Brother Fox was mighty restless in his mind. He didn't do a stroke of work. He'd sit down, and then he'd get up; he'd stand still and look up in the tops of the trees, and then he'd walk back and forth with his hands behind him and look down at the ground.

"I says to him, says I, 'I hope you are not sick, Brother Fox."

"Says he, 'I can't tell, Brother Rabbit; I never felt better in my life.

"I says to him, says I, 'I hope you are not sick, Brother Fox."

"Says he, 'To can't tell, Brother Rabbit; I never felt better in my life.

"I says to him, says I, 'I hope you are not sick, Brother Fox."

"Says he, 'To can't tell, Brother Rabbit; I never felt better in my life.

"Is an hear of the river and Brother Bear lived ri

"Says 1: That's mighty tunny. Stocker Bear had a famous barbecue, and I thought Brother Wolf was going to have one too." "Says Brother Fox: 'Is dinner over? Is it too late to go?" "Says 1: "Why, Brother Fox, the sun's nearly down. By the time you get to Brother Bear's house he'il be gone to bed, and by the time you go across the swamp to Brother Wolf's house the chickens will be crowing for day." "Well, well, well: says Brother Fox. I've been all day trying to make up my mind which road I'il take, and now fit's too late." "And that was the fact," continued Mr. Rabbit. "The poor creature had been all mind which road I'it take, and how its too late.

"And that was the fact," continued Mr.
Rabbit. "The poor creature had been all day trying to make up his mind which road he'd take. Now, then, what is the moral?"
Sweetest Susan looked at Mrs. Meadows, but Mrs. Meadows merely smiled. Ruster John rattled the marbles in his pocket.

"I know," said Drusilla.

"What?" inquired Mr. Rabbit.

"Go down one road an' git one dinner, den cut cross an' git some mo' dinner, an' den go back home down de yuother road."

"Mr. Rabbit shook his head.

"I't you want anything, go and get it," suggested Buster John.

"Mr. Rabbit shook his head and looked at Sweetest Susan, whereupon she said:

"I't you can't make up your mind you'll have to go hungry."

Mr. Rabbit shook his head.

"Eat a good breakfast," said Mrs. Meadows, "and you won't be worried about your dinner."

"All wrong!" exclaimed Mr. Rabbit with a triumphant chuckle. "The moral is this: He who wants too much is more than likely to get nothing."

"Well, remarked Mrs. Meadows, dubiously, "!' you have to work out a moral as if it was a sum in arithmetic, I'll thank you not to trouble me with any more morals."

"The motion is seconded and carried," exclaimed Mr. Thimblefinger.

Represented in the adjoining cut. After years of careful study and experimentation he perfected and introduced "The 'Common Sense' Compulsory Inhalation Method," for the treatment of all diseases to which the lungs and air passages are subject.

Having purchased the State right, the Nixon Depurator Company of Los Angeles, Cal., have established their offices in rooms 84 and 85, Bryson Building, have instituted a Depurator Cabinet, and are prepared to undertake the treatment of Asthma, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Colds, Hay Fever, etc.

The management hereby extends to the public a cordial invitation to call and inspect the merits of our system of treatment.

To Whom It May Concern

This is to certify that I have been afflicted with lung trouble for two years. My cough and nervous condition was such that it was impossible for me to get sufficient rest, wholly incapacitating me from performing my household duties. This last year I have had frequent hemorrhages, which were checked with the first treatment I received. I commenced treatment October 13th and continued it five weeks, and I will say that in my case It worked like magic. My condition has been steadily improving, and I can say in all candor that I believe that any person suffering from lung trouble in any form, can be greatly benefited, or CURED, by giving the Nixon Lung Depurator a trial. MRS, LAURA DUNGAN, Boswell, Indiana.

I have suffered for fifteen years with catarrh and throat trouble; have been taking the Nixon method of compulsory inhalation treatment, in the Lung Depurator, almost two weeks, and feel much relieved and can heartily recommend the treatment to all sufferers with head, throat and lung troubles. There are twenty-three patients here taking the treatment, and all have been greatly benefited, and highly recommend the treatment.

H. J. KARSTENS, 138-137 Eric St., Chicago. Ill.

I beg leave to state that on the 10th day of March, 1894, I commenced taking Dr. Nixon's compulsory inhalation treatment for consumption. At that time I had night sweats and chills every day and night. Have taken the treatment two weeks and the chills and night sweats have left me and I feel better in every way, and I have received more benefit from this treatment in the last two weeks than from all the medicine I have ever taken.

To Suffering Humanity:

I feel it my duty to make this statement in regard to the Nixon Consumption Cure. I have taken the treatment five weeks in all and find it the thing for lung trouble. I have not worked to amount to anything for a year—could not work all last summer at my trade (carpenter and contractor). My family and friends did not expect me to liye from one day to the next. I coughed constantly; expectorated blood at times. Now my cough is getting very much better; am expectorating less, and am going to work feeling good. I would advise all who are troubled with lung and throat disease to take the Nixon treatment at once. For any information write me at Hannibal, Missouri.
